EUROPE DELAYS NEW DEBT PLEA TILL FALL VOTE

Minor Details of Treaty to Be Decided Before Final Acceptance.

MAY BE OF BENEFIT TO ARMS CUT PLAN

Hope of Nations Is Based on More Conciliatory View of Congress.

By HAROLD J. T. HORAN.

European debtor nations of the United States will hold in abeyance any formal initiative for a reopening of their debt settlement until after the Presidential elections in November, it became known here yesterday.

The agreement reached at Lausanne Saturday has still to be accepted by the Parliaments of the various countries. Several minor details of the treaty are to be worked out before such countries as Czechoslovakia, Portugal, Greece, Roumania and Jugoslavia will sign the treaty. These matters will require at least three or four months for definite settlement before America's debtor nations are in a position to make any approach to this Government.

Informal canvassing in the various legations and embassies yesterday revealed a general inclination on the part of diplomatic representatives to postpone the next, and perhaps, the most vital step in the war debts and reparations proceedings. The action to be taken by this Government dominates any settlement that the continental nations may make with Germany. At present the President will consider himself bound by the formal declarations of the congressional joint resolution of last December which forbade any reduction or cancellation of war debts.

May Bring Arms Accord.

There is another factor in the situation, however. The period of three or four months may bring about an unequivocal acceptance by the major powers of the disarmament proposal of the President which has been accorded almost general acceptance. A tendency has been noted in some quarters, however, to bring the Hoover disarmament plan more in line with the recent naval disarmament proposal of Great Britain.

In his statement of last June, the President specifically declared that the United States was maintaining a strictly "hands-off" attitude with regard to German reparations. At the time the Hoover moratorium was declared, however, mention was made of the corollary of disarmament. The President then said:

"We are not involved in the discussion of strictly European problems, of which the payment of German reparations is one. It (the moratorium) represents our willingness to make a contribution to the early restoration of world prosperity in which our people have so deep an interest.

"I wish further to add that while this action has no bearing on the conference for limitation of land armaments * * * inasmuch as the burden of competitive armaments has contributed to bring about this de-

Pope Pius Gives Thanks For Accord at Lausanne

Vatican City, July 10 (A.P.).—Pope Pius gave thanks today for the settlement at Lausanne, describing the treaty concluded there yesterday as an answer to the eight days of world-wide prayer for which he asked in a recent encyclical.

Reading a decree of beatification of the Italian Sister Maria Di Rosa, the Pontiff said this world crisis has shown the futility of wealth, since the struggle for money brought on the present struggle for bread.

50 Believed Dead In Nanking Blast

Ammunition Storage Depot Catches Fire and Explodes, Rocking City.

Nanking, China, July 10 (A.P.).—Shortly before noon today an ammunition storage depot on the outskirts of Nanking caught fire and exploded with a blast which jarred the city. Probably 50 or more persons were killed.

Persons living in the immediate vicinity were panic-stricken and it was me time before fire-fighting apparatus was brought into action. By then the flames had spread and smaller explosions came at intervals. It was impossible for anyone to get close enough to what remained of the arsenal to determine how many had perished.

It seemed certain that a guard of 40 soldiers had been killed in the first blast and the fire which started immediately afterward.

French Insist That America Reduce Debts

Paris, July 10 (U.P.).—Premier Edouard Herriot made it plain today that unless the United States scales down the debts Europe owes her, France will consider the new Lausanne reparations agreement nothing more than a scrap of paper.

Fearful of an adverse vote by the French Parliament, the Premier said that operation of the agreement by which Germany is relieved of all reparations except approximately $714,000,000 depends upon two things—America's debt readjustment, and approval by the French Parliament.

"In the event the United States does not agree to a debt reduction, France will remain in her previous position," he declared today upon his return from the intereuropean conference.

"That is the extent of our engagement at Lausanne," he added, "and

HINES URGES SPEED IN B.E.F. RAIL LOANS

Asks Veterans Not to Delay; 1,400 New Arrivals Are Added to Force.

While Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of veteran's affairs, advised veterans in a formal statement yesterday not to delay making applications for transportation and travel subsistence, B. E. F. headquarters announced that 1,400 more veterans have arrived in the city.

Gen. Hines declared that citizens in Washington sincerely interested in the cause of the veterans can do much good by encouraging the B. E. F. members to take advantage of the transportation and travel subsistence. He observed that little good will result from encouraging the veterans to remain here, as employment can not be given them in Washington, "but every endeavor will be made to provide employment in their several communities."

Gen. Hines advised veterans of the Spanish American War who have come to Washington to join the encampment to find out immediately if they are still eligible for National Soldiers' Homes as transportation to the homes will be provided.

Veterans who came to Washington in automobiles are being provided with travel subsistence, Gen. Hines said. He announced that the American Red Cross has agreed to provide for transportation of wives and children in all cases where the Veterans' Administration has approved transportation for the veteran.

"The Veterans' Administration is prepared to give prompt service, and

WIFE ADMITS HAWAII WEDDING FALSEHOOD

Married to Tobacco Heir in Michigan, She Reveals on Questioning.

Winston-Salem, N. C., July 10 (A.P.).—Disclosure that Libby Holman admitted she married Smith Reynolds in Monroe, Mich., instead of in Hawaii, came from Forsythe County authorities today as they pressed their investigation in the mysterious fatal shooting of the young heir to the tobacco millions early Wednesday.

The widow, now held incommunicado in Reynolds, the palatial family esate, as a material witness, was quoted as having testified at the first session of the secret inquest that the ceremony was performed November 29, 1931, by a justice of the peace.

The inquest will resume at 1 p. m. tomorrow.

Previous Escape Reported.

Delving into young Reynolds' history for the last several months, authorities here said they had been informed he had a narrow escape from death by a pistol bullet on a Long Island outing about a year ago.

Sheriff Transou Scott said his information was that Reynolds' shirt was pierced by a pistol bullet on this occasion, the date of which was set as between July 25 and August 1, 1931, or the last part of June or first part of July that year.

Admitting they were without confirmation of the report, the officials said they were seeking to disprove or verify it, and if found true, to ascertain who was in the party and all other circumstances.

Details of the marriage which apparently took place just six days after Reynolds' first wife, Anne Cannon, obtained her Reno divorce, had been obscure.

Regains Composure.

It was announced in New York May 20, with a statement that the couple had been married secretly several months before in Hawaii while Reynolds, a 20-year-old aviation enthusiast, was returning from a trip around the world by airplane and steamer.

Allowed to remain in her room with deputies standing watch at her door day and night, Miss Holman was reported today to have regained her composure. Her collapse had followed the fatal shooting of Reynolds

King's Envoy Demands Apology by De Valera

Governor-General James McNeill Resents Personal Snubs by Irish Leaders; Break Threatened With Free State.

Dublin, Irish Free State, July 10 (A.P.).—Governor General James McNeill, an appointee of King George V of England, tonight publicly demanded that President De Valera apologize for what he considered personal snubs by members of the Irish Free State government.

In a letter to President De Valera, accepted widely as indicating a complete rupture between the De Valera government and Great Britain, Mr. McNeill said an alternative to an apology would be his removal as governor general.

Presumably he meant that he would ask the British crown to remove him.

The first of the snubs occurred in April, when Sean O'Kelly, vice president of the executive council, and Frank Aiken, minister of defense, ostentatiously walked out of a party at the French Legation upon the arrival of the governor general and the playing of the British national anthem.

The incidents extended through the eucharistic congress, which closed here two weeks ago.

With the publication tonight of the letter demanding an apology or his removal from office, Gov. McNeill, in defiance of a direct order from the Free State executive council not to do so, published a series of previous letters between him and President De Valera on the subject.

The first was a letter from President De Valera dated May 7, in which the president, commenting on the affair at the French Legation, said it was "unfortunate and regrettable and should not have been permitted to occur," but added: "Further than this I am unable to go."

On July 7, Governor General McNeill wrote further of "discourtesies with which your ministers treated me."

"You have made it necessary for me to explain to my countrymen that without any change of principle I have not suddenly become a coward on account of the attractions of an honorable office," the governor general added.

He said that unless an apology was received within three days from Mr. De Valera and the ministers who behaved "with the grossest discourtesy" he would publish the correspondence.

GEN. TREAT'S HOME LOOTED BY THIEVES

Police Nab Trio and Retrieve $5,000 Furnishings; Cab Hauled Off Goods.

In the absence of Gen. Charles A. Treat, U. S. A., retired, who was chief of the American mission to Italy in 1918, a band of thieves looted his home of furnishings valued at $5,000, which were soon recovered by police.

The stolen articles were cached in an apartment at 1909 Fourteenth street northwest, where they were traced by police. A crowd of 2,000 persons witnessed the removal of the loot from the hiding place.

Suspicions of a neighbor of Gen. Treat's caused the arrest of three colored men, who are accused of breaking into the Treat home at 1818 Nineteenth street northwest. They Armored cars were ordered into the Mons region, where they will go on patrol duty until further notice. It was reported in high government circles that the state will not hesitate to enforce martial law in the event of further disturbances.

UPRISING OF REBELS REPORTED IN BRAZIL

Land and Sea Forces Ordered Out to Nip Uprising, Dispatch Says.

Montevideo, Uruguay, July 10 (U. P.).—Private advices received from Brazil tonight said a revolutionary uprising against the government of President Getulio Vargas had started at Sao Paulo, important Brazilian coffee center. A later and totally unconfirmed dispatch said rebels had gained an initial victory.

The movement was said to be supported by the states of Rio Grande do Sul, Matto Grosso and Minas Geraes. Political dissension has been apparent in Brazil for some time, with leaders of the powerful southern state of Rio Grande do Sul at odds with the federal government at various times.

The capital, Rio de Janeiro, was reported quiet, but a stringent government censorship hindered the transmission of news.

El Ideal's correspondent at Rivera, Uruguay, just across the border from Santa Anna, reported that a telegram received from Porto Alegre said President Vargas had ordered land and sea forces to go to Sao Paulo to put down the revolt. The dispatch added that the government was confident

Bones of Cleric, Gone 17 Years, Are Found

Estes Park, Colo., July 10 (A.P.).—Disappearance of the Rev. Thornton R. Sampson, Austin, Tex., educator and friend of Woodrow Wilson, on a fishing trip seventeen years ago, was believed solved today with the finding of a skeleton at the foot of a cliff near Odessa Lake. The skeleton was found by Weldrum Loucks, a member of a trail crew in the Rocky Mountain National Park.

Edmund B. Rogers, park superintendent, said an examination of personal effects lying nearby convinced him the skeleton was that of Dr. Sampson. Among the effects was a diary in which the last notation was made in September, 1915.

Capital Swimmer Drowned in River

Dudley Lovley, 30, Steps Off Ledge Into Deep Water Near Idlewilde, Md.

Dudley Lovley, 30 years old, a resident of the District, was drowned in the West River near Idlewilde, Md., when he stepped into deep water while swimming yesterday. His body was recovered 15 minutes later by use of grappling hooks.

Lovley, who was a carpenter, was accompanied on an outing to the resort by a group of friends, including Irene L. Matlack, of 138 Bryant street northwest. He was said to be a poor swimmer and sank almost instantly when he stepped off a ledge into deep water.

Donald Little and Eugene Zunk, residents of the resort, recovered the body. The West Annapolis fire rescue squad applied respiration for more than an hour without success. He was pronounced dead by Dr. F. B. West.

Lovley came here from Middletown, Ohio, about a year ago. He has relatives in Middletown. He lived at 138 Bryant street northwest.

CONGRESS SET TO ACCEPT AID MEASURE VETO

Exhausted by Its Long Fight; Will Bow to Hoover's Wishes.

PRIVATE LOANS DRIVE WAS LED BY GARNER

Adjournment This Week Is Hinged Upon Relief Agreement.

(Associated Press.)

In no mood to fight longer, Congress is ready to accept today President Hoover's death warrant for the $2,100,000,000 unemployment relief bill and rush through a modified measure.

Weary leaders looked to the veto message, already penned and waiting at the White House, as marking the end of the long and bitter controversy over Federal aid to the jobless.

They laid plans yesterday for speedily enacting a new bill acceptable to the President, confident that it could be accomplished in time to wind up the prolonged session this week.

The doomed bill will go to the White House today, bearing the final approval of Congress. President Hoover, according to his advisers, will send it back immediately with a veto message recommending elimination of the provision for loans to individuals over which he and Speaker Garner have clashed so bitterly.

Veto Defeat Unlikely.

The veto message will go to the House, where the relief bill originated. House leaders acknowledged they lack sufficient votes to pass the measure over the veto, and had not decided definitely whether the attempt even would be made.

As soon as the veto message has been received, leaders will move to draft new legislation within the limits prescribed by the President. To speed procedure, it is likely to be built upon bills which already have passed the House or Senate.

President Hoover has consented to two sections of the present bill, and they probably will be incorporated in the new legislation. They are the provisions for an emergency relief fund of $300,000,000 and a public works program of $322,000,000, part of which would be subject to the condition of the Treasury.

Center of Conflict.

The conflict has centered over the third section, which will be modified. This would authorize the Reconstruction Corporation to expand its borrowing power by $1,500,000,000 for loans to create employment.

The present bill provides for loans to private individuals and corporations as well as public agencies, and the President will ask that it be re-

Many Injured, Houses Razed In Ohio Storm

Akron, Ohio, July 10 (A.P.).—Wind storms struck Summit County with tornadic force late today, laying waste the residential section of Mogadore, a village of 2,500 seven miles east of here, and doing widespread property damage in Goodyear Heights, an Eastern Akron suburb.

At least half a dozen persons suffered injuries at Mogadore, one of the injured believed to be critically hurt. One woman was cut by flying slate at Akron.

The business district of Mogadore escaped damage, the brunt of the twister falling on the residential section, where virtually all trees were uprooted or blown down, about a dozen houses ripped from their foundations and extensive damage done to automobiles, schools and churches.

A short time later, high winds swooped down on the eastern section

CANNON TO OPPOSE ROOSEVELT, IS VIEW

Bishop Leans to Hoover in Scoring Democratic Wet Plank at Meeting.

Lake Junaluska, N. C., July 10 (A. P.).—Bishop James Cannon, jr., who called the dry conference which led to the organized anti-Smith movement of 1928, indicated here today that he would oppose the election of Franklin D. Roosevelt, the Democratic presidential nominee.

After reading the report of the Board of Temperance and Social Service of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, which said "our people should vote for men and women who believe prohibition ought to be the law," Bishop Cannon described Roosevelt as "an outspoken enemy of the eighteenth amendment," and said President Hoover's last statement on the subject recorded him as opposed to repeal of the amendment.

The Methodist bishop spoke in the auditorium of his church's assembly grounds here. The report of the Board of Temperance and Social Service was written by him as its president.

In discussing the presidential candidates of the two major parties, he said he was speaking as "an individual citizen and a Methodist minister."

"Mr. Roosevelt's election," he said, "would place in the White House an outspoken enemy of the eighteenth amendment who favors immediate repeal."

He described the message transmitting the Wickeraham report to Congress as President Hoover's latest official statement of his attitude to-

ROOSEVELT BID TO SEE HOOVER HERE REJECTED

Executive Declines to Meet Governor on Waterway Treaty.

PRESIDENT IS SILENT ON NEW YORK'S PART

Says Conference Not Needed Now; Cites Progress of St. Lawrence Project.

(Associated Press.)

Politely but firmly, President Hoover yesterday rejected the suggestion by Gov. Roosevelt, Democratic presidential nominee, that they consult in Washington to speed the negotiations for a St. Lawrence waterway treaty with Canada.

The Chief Executive late yesterday dispatched a telegram to Gov. Roosevelt at Albany saying the negotiations toward a treaty were proceeding satisfactorily and that there was no need for a conference now.

Roosevelt, in a lengthy telegram to the President Saturday, said he understood that matters concerning New York's share in the project were delaying completion of the treaty. He proposed that there be a "cutting of red tape" to speed the negotiations and said he would hold himself in readiness to come to Washington for the conference.

Written at Conference.

"I am in receipt of your telegram of July 9," the President said yesterday in reply. "I am glad to assure you that the negotiations between the United States and the Dominion of Canada in respect to the Great Lakes Waterway are making progress and that it will not be necessary to interrupt your cruise by a visit to Washington.

"Having ardently advocated for over 10 years the great work of completing this shipway from Duluth and Chicago to the sea, I am glad to know that it will meet with your support."

The President's telegram was drawn up at a conference in the Lincoln study of the White House yesterday afternoon attended by Walter Newton, one of his secretaries in charge of political affairs, and James Grafton Rogers, Assistant Secretary of State, who has been handling the St. Lawrence negotiations with Canada.

Cruise Is Planned.

Referring to the governor's suggestion for a conference, the President said that although international treaties fall within the sole jurisdiction of the Federal Government, the administration had consulted Roosevelt and leaders in other States during the negotiations.

"I am in hopes an agreement can be reached between the governments," Mr. Hoover continued. "But it has not yet been concluded, and I shall be glad to have you advised when this occurs."

Roosevelt, who is planning a cruise with his sons this week, in his telegram Saturday said he had been informed by the power authority of New York State that the issues still unsettled in the negotiations with Canada had been referred to the President for final determination.

He said the New York power authority had reported to him that "the question, failure to agree upon which had prevented complete accord, is the proportion of the cost to be borne by the State of New York."

Silent on New York's Share.

Mr. Hoover, in his telegram, made no mention of the question involving New York's share of the proposed project.

The President's telegram follows in full:

"I am in receipt of your telegram of July 9. I am glad to assure you

Hermit Leads Night Hikers To Murder Scene in Woods

Scoutmaster and Boy Follow White-Bearded Recluse, Who Disappears After Pointing to Open Grave of Man; Revolver Near Body.

Media, Pa., July 10 (A.P.).—A scoutmaster and his Boy Scout assistant returned from a midnight hike in the woods today with an eerie tale of a hermit with flowing white beard and a cackling laugh who led them to the scene of a murder. The hermit had met the scouts in the woods and bade them follow him, which they did.

The flashlights of Wilmer Brown, 35, and Walter Hawks, 17, flickering on tangled brush and a dim trail through the woods, suddenly picked out the strange apparition of the hermit, they said. Curiosity overcoming fright, they stayed while he challenged them to "see something."

He led them to a spot about 500 yards off the trail, they related, and pointed to three fallen trees, which formed a sort of natural casket. The scouts peered closely and saw the decomposed body of a man. Nearby was a revolver. They turned to address their guide but he was gone.

It took the scouts an hour to find the spot again for the police. Coroner J. Evan Scheehle concluded after an examination that the man had been beaten to death and his body stuffed away there. Despite the revolver there were no bullet holes.

The man was well-dressed. The only thing in his pockets was a pair of smoked glasses. Expensive dental work probably will be the only clew to his identity.

Searching parties beat through the woods all day today, but found no further trace of the old hermit.

One Dead, Many Hurt Toll of Storms in West

St. Paul, July 10 (A.P.).—Windstorms in southwestern Minnesota and southeastern South Dakota last night caused one death and two score injuries.

South Sioux Falls, S. Dak., and Steen and Ellsworth, Minn., were hardest hit. Elliot Dunkelberger was killed at South Sioux Falls, and eleven injured. Five were hurt near Steen and five near Comfrey, Minn. Numerous farm buildings were wrecked. Butterfield also was hit and at Lester, 30 miles southeast of Sioux Falls, electric power lines were destroyed.

U. S. Fight Judge Mobbed By Crowd at French Bout

Soldiers Prevent Lynching of American After He Is Trampled by Boxing Fans Incensed Over His Favoring of Al Brown Against Kid Francis.

Marseilles, France, July 10 (U.P.).—Steel-helmeted soldiers today saved Dr. James V. Sparks, an American, from being lynched by riotous fight fans who disapproved of his decision as a judge in a bout between Al Brown, of Panama, bantamweight champion of the world, and Kid Francis, of Italy.

Sparks was bruised and trampled by the crowd, and would have been killed save for the intervention of squads of police and soldiers who rushed to the ringside and threw a protective cordon around him.

The scene at the ringside was almost unparalleled in sporting history. The crowd, strongly supporting Francis in his attempt to wrest the championship from Brown, became frenzied when it became known that Dr. Sparks, one of the three judges, was deciding in favor of the Panama fighter.

A Frenchman, the second judge, also voted for Brown, but the third, an Italian, fearing to face the mob, disappeared and could not be found for half an hodr, after which he cast a trembling vote for Francis.

As a result of the disagreement Brown retains his championship. He weighed 117 pounds and Kid Francis weighed 116.

Trouble began for Dr. Sparks at the end of the fourteenth round, when a hoodlum thrust a revolver into his side and ordered him to turn over his score sheets. Sparks obeyed, but an instant later leaped into the ring and informed the referee of what had happened.

The referee ordered Sparks from the ring when the bell rang for the fifteenth round, and the crowd began howling for blood. Meanwhile, the score sheets showing the American's decision favoring Brown became the property of the maddened fans, and as the fight progressed in the final round they gathered threateningly around the doctor.

When the final bell rang, Sparks attempted to climb into the ring to give his decision. There was an immediate uproar, and a rush to the ringside found Sparks under foot and being trampled. The police on duty, reinforced by a squad of infantrymen in steel helmets, forced their way through the crowd and rescued the judge.

A majority of the fight critics awarded Brown an easy victory, but the referee was forced, on fear of his life, to declare the bout "no contest."

FARMER-LABORITES MAKE COXEY CHOICE

Replaces Webb as Candidate for President; Running Mate in Doubt.

Omaha, Nebr., July 10 (A.P.).—Members of the executive committee of the Farmer-Labor party tonight chose Jacob S. Coxey, of Massilon, Ohio, as their presidential candidate, to replace Col. Frank E. Webb, of San Francisco and Washington, who was disqualified by the committee several weeks ago.

Roy M. Harrop, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, chairman of the committee, announced the vice presidential candidate will be selected from among the following:

Walter W. Waters, of Portland, Oreg., commander in chief of the bonus expeditionary forces now camped in Washington demanding immediate payment of a cash bonus.

W. C. Crosby, of Minneapolis, who was a congressional candidate in the Minnesota primary.

Robert L. McLendon, of Vossburg, Miss., prominent in Southern activities of the party.

Newton Jenkins, of Chicago, unsuccessful senatorial candidate in the Illinois Republican primary.

Milo Reno, of Agency, Iowa, former president of the National Farmers Union.

Harrop explained the vice presidential candidate will be selected by mail vote of the full committee membership. He said 21 States were represented by their national committeemen or by proxies at the meeting tonight.

The full membership of the executive committee, he added, will also be polled to ratify action tentatively agreed upon today to cancel the committee membership of Roland C. Bruner, of Kansas City, and Frank Lowson, of Washington, D. C., who supported the candidacy of Webb before a recent "unity convention" at Kansas City.

LIBBY HOLMAN WED TO REYNOLDS IN U. S.

about an hour after a party had broken up at midnight Tuesday.

Albert Walker, 19-year-old chum and secretary to Reynolds, remained in the county jail, also held as a material witness. His meals were sent to the jail by friends, and he feasted on fried chicken instead of prison fare.

Checking Romance.

Checking up on reports from various unrevealed sources, authorities admitted they were attempting to get a complete picture of the acquaintance and romance of the husky-throated singer of the blues and the youngest child of the late Richard Joshua Reynolds, tobacco manufacturer, who left an estate now estimated to exceed $100,000,000.

Besides keeping the wires to Monroe humming with requests for verification of these reports, the authorities did not let the usual Sunday of rest interfere with their local inquiries.

A group of investigators headed by Sheriff Scott and Assistant Solicitor J. Erle McMichael, went to Reynolds shortly before noon today to continue their examination of the premises.

Monroe, Mich., July 10 (A.P.).—A search of the county clerk records made today revealed that a marriage license was issued here November 29, 1931, to Zachary Reynolds, 30, who gave his address as New York City, and Elizabeth Holman.

License Was Suppressed.

The licensees are believed to have been Smith Reynolds, heir to the tobacco fortune, and Libby Holman, the torch singer.

The license was suppressed at the time of issuance and was revealed today only after it became known Reynolds' young widow had testified they were married here. The return showed that the couple was married by Justice Fred H. Schoepfer, since deceased. The application was made on November 23, in accordance with Michigan's five-day law, and apparently the couple waited either in Detroit or Toledo for the license.

Reynolds gave his occupation as student. Miss Holman gave no occupation. Reynolds said he had been married once before, but the name of his first wife was not given.

GEN. TREAT'S HOME LOOTED BY THIEVES

carted the stolen goods away in a taxicab.

Gen. Treat, who was in command of an American battle sector on the Italian front in 1918, was away from his home when the thieves broke in. Valuable silverware, linens and jewelry were taken.

A neighbor observed the colored men driving to the Treat home and carrying away taxicab loads of furnishings. He reported the incident to police. An investigation showed the home had been almost stripped of all furnishings.

Detectives J. W. Shimon, W. V. Christian and R. J. Meghan, of the Third Precinct, observing some other articles which were parked for transportation, secreted themselves in the house. After a short wait, two colored men drove up in a taxicab and were preparing to remove the last of the furnishings, when the policemen collared them.

The loot was then traced to the Fourteenth street apartment. As the police prepared to return the booty, a colored man walked into the apartment, and he, too, was arrested after a short struggle with Detective Shimon.

The removal of the furnishings attracted a crowd of pedestrians and motorists who cluttered the streets and sidewalks near Fourteenth and U streets and impeded traffic.

Those held for investigation in the robbery are Philip Johnson, 16, of 1635 Thirteenth street northwest; William Reams, 40, of 1909 Fourteenth street northwest, and Alfred Bagley, 28, of 1030 Whittingham street northeast.

European Life Is Viewed As Round of Conferences

By JOHN J. DALY

AND another conference bit the dust.

The conferees at Lausanne, having accomplished part of their design, which is to leave Uncle Sam holding the bag, fold up the show.

From Lausanne, headquarters of the Swiss Yodelers, comes word that the international statesmen representing six leading powers have decided to pack up and call it a day; but there will be another conference. There always is another conference. It is an old European custom. At the next conference, according to a resolution adopted at this conference, the United States will be asked to attend.

First they call a conference—at Lausanne. Then they call for cancellation of the debts; never directly, of course, but by innuendo. These men are statesmen, and they speak the brilliant language of diplomacy.

* * * *

IN all these conferences there is usually disagreement, except on one point: How to mulct old Uncle Sam.

The disagreements usually lead to an agreement to come back again to Lausanne for another conference.

Life amongst the Lausanne conferees is just one agreeable disagreement after another.

As fast as a conferee unpacks his bags, after arrival home, his wife gets out his extra shirts and linen, shakes the moth-balls out of his morning clothes, and starts him on his way back again to another conference at Lausanne.

* * * *

IF the Lausanne conference is not quite enough, there is usually one going on at Geneva.

All these nations, having so many traveling statesmen and their aids constantly on the move, keep a steady flow of international exchange in circulation.

It is no longer true in Europe, as it may be in other places, that one half the world does not know how the other half lives. One half the world over there is busy watching the arrival and departure of the other half, coming and going to conference.

ROOSEVELT BID TO SEE HOOVER ON WATERWAY PACT REJECTED

that the negotiations between the United States and the Dominion of Canada in respect to the Great Lakes waterway are making progress and that it will not be necessary to interrupt your cruise by a visit to Washington.

"These negotiations, as you know, involving a score of intricate problems, have been under way for nearly three years and have now reached a hopeful aspect. While under our Constitution international treaties fall within the sole jurisdiction of the Federal Government, nevertheless the representatives appointed by you and leaders in other States primarily concerned have been consulted during the course of the negotiations, I am in hopes an agreement can be reached between the two governments, but it has not yet been concluded, and I shall be glad to have you advised when this occurs.

"The question of the disposal of the by-product of power which will result from the works which border the State of New York, like all domestic questions of this character affecting the two countries, is reserved by the proposed treaty for purely domestic action by each country. This proposal is not the subject of international agreement. If a treaty is concluded and is ratified by the Senate, then the domestic questions which may arise must be settled through the action of both the Senate and the House of Representatives in accordance with Federal and State law and in accord with the interest of all the States of the Union.

"You will realize that neither you nor I have authority to enter upon agreements in respect to these domestic questions, but if the treaty is consummated and ratified I shall be glad to consult with you and other governors. I have no doubt that we can make such recommendations to the Congress as will be helpful to them in solving the particular domestic proglems relating to each State.

"Having ardently advocated for over ten years the great work of completing this shipway from Duluth and Chicago to the sea, I am glad to know that it will meet with your support."

ward repeal and read this quotation from it:

"The commission by a large majority does not favor repeal of the (eighteenth) amendment as the method of cure for the inherent abuses of the liquor traffic. I am in accord with this view."

The report of the board itself denounced vigorously the Democratic party's plank advocating repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

After asserting the plank on prohibition is as binding as any other part of the platform, the report declares, "Any attempt by any party platform declaration to bind the members of that party on a moral issue is a distinct invasion of the moral realm and is, therefore, not only an indefensible infringement of the rights of conscience but a gross insult to independent citizenship.

"Such action will be repudiated by conscientious men and women throughout the country, and this entirely apart from prohibition."

The report urges that "our people should vote for men and women who believe that prohibition ought to be the law" in all elections "from constable to President."

The report was written by Bishop James Cannon, jr., president of the board.

The Republican party's plank on prohibition was said to pledge the party to "efficient law enforcement, opposes any form of attempted nullification, sets forth the futility of so-called referendum, declares that prohibition is not a party political issue, and that no public official, which includes President, Vice President, senators, congressmen, state legislators, nor any members of the Republican party are bound by the convention's action on this question; insists that the progress and the gains which have already been made in dealing with the evils inherent with the liquor traffic must be preserved, and the evils eliminated; and asserts that the convention does not favor submission of the question of retention or repeal of the eighteenth amendment without a substitute therefor. * * *

"The platform indicates no preference between the eighteenth amendment and the proposed substitute, but leaves the decision of that question to be determined by the people. * * * * * * The Republican platform takes no position for or against the repeal of the eighteenth amendment, but does oppose repeal without constitutional safeguards against the saloon and the violation of the rights of the States."

The report adds:

"Should the prohibition amendment proposed by the Democratic convention be ratified by the people, the legal status of the liquor traffic would be exactly the same as obtained before the ratification of the amendment, with no Federal constitutional guarantee against the return of the saloon."

The last sentence of the report declares "Methodism * * * here and now declares to all the world that in this war there will be no surrender, no retreat, no compromise."

1,400 MORE BONUS VETERANS ARRIVE FOR STAY IN CAPITAL

this service can best be given when spread over several days instead of being crowded into the last two," Gen. Hines said.

The new arrivals included a number of families and many individuals, it was announced by the B. E. F. billeting officer. To care for some of the newly arrived families, fifteen more tents have been placed at the disposal of the bonus forces by the National Guard, and it was said more would be available if necessary. Of the 1,400 new arrivals, 450 were from California.

Acquisition of the additional tents resulted from a conference yesterday between Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, superintendent of police, and Walter W. Waters, national commander of the bonus army. Means of housing and feeding the veterans on a long-time basis was given thorough discussion at the conference.

Up until last night, 591 veterans had left the city, and 94 applied for transportation yesterday, it was learned at the Veterans' Administration offices. B. E. F. officials termed an earlier police report that 1,000 had left as exaggerated. Many of the veterans applying for transportation are not leaving the city, they said.

Refuse Waters' Offer.

The 450 veterans from California, the main group of an army of 2,000 that left Los Angeles some weeks ago, refused Commander Waters' offer yesterday to send them to the Anacostia camp. R. W. Robertson, their commander, said they had come to Washington to be seen by Congress, and not to have a vacation.

Gen. Glassford was given the same information. He expressed the hope that the men would leave town, warning them that those remaining would face hunger and privation. The Californians are camped at Third street and Missouri avenue southwest, three blocks from the Capitol.

Commander Waters denied reports that he intended to resign. He will speak over the radio and at public meetings tonight in Camden, N. J., and tomorrow night in Hoboken. He will make other appeals for contributions later in the week.

Mining Pictures Shown.

Sound pictures of placer gold mining in Nevada, Utah, Eastern Colorado and the Rocky Mountains were shown at Camp Marks last night to an audience of 8,000. The pictures are being circulated as a proposed cure for unemployment. The veterans evinced deep interest, it was said.

The pictures, together with others, were exhibited by Pathe News, under supervision of Al Holland, in cooperation with the Police Department. Power was brought by a line from Copenhaver's coal yard in Anacostia, and the screen and sound apparatus was attached to a backstop at the camp.

Urbain Ledoux, the "Mr. Zero," of New York slums, joined the bonus forces as a helper yesterday. He announced plans for a human auction of war veterans to raise food, to be held as near the Capitol as possible.

Joe Angelo, recipient of the Distinguished Service Cross, was buried 4 feet below the earth at Thirteenth and D streets southwest at 8 p. m. yesterday as a feature of the bonus encampment. It was proposed to have Angelo remain buried until "the bonus bill is signed," but he was ordered disinterred by Inspector H. A. Headley, acting night superintendent of police.

Youth Killed and 2 Hurt in Plane.

Sioux City, Iowa, July 10 (A.P.).—Alex Sibert, 17, son of a Sioux City business man, was instantly killed and John Sibert, 24, pilot, an elder brother, was seriously injured today when their airplane went into a spin and crashed at Rickenbacker Airport. Hundreds of sightseers at the field witnessed the accident.

ECONOMIC PROBLEM PUT FIRST BY GROUP

Political League's Platform Minimizes Importance of Prohibition Issue.

Cleveland, Ohio, July 10 (A.P.).—A platform making the liquor question subservient to economic issues and supporting Norman Thomas for the Presidency on the Socialist ticket, was advanced to the voters today by the national convention of the League for Independent Political Action.

The preamble to the platform proper, reaffirmed the league's "solidarity with the American worker and farmer," and urged "hastening the end of the present depression and substituting intelligent political leadership for misrule."

In a plank dealing on subject of civil rights and justice, the league dealt briefly with prohibition:

"While on Democratic principles we recognize the right of the people to vote on the abolition or modification of the eighteenth amendment, we condemn the Republican and Democratic parties for subordinating urgent economic issues to the liquor question."

An attempt was made on the floor of the convention by Robert H. Haskell, of Brooklyn, N. Y., to commit the league to outright repeal, but his substitute plank was drowned out in a cry of "No!" by other delegates.

The league qualified its support of Thomas by declaring that "We do not necessarily support every feature in the ultimate program of the Socialist party."

"We do believe," its platform read, "that in the present election the candidacy and platform of Norman Thomas is infinitely preferable to those of other parties, and we therefore urge all our members and friends to work and vote for him."

The platform, composed of six planks, deals with labor, utilities, agriculture, banking systems, political and civil rights and armaments and national affairs.

of victory. Meanwhile, all government troops at Santa Anna were confined to barracks for an emergency.

Extraordinary excitement was noticeable in Santa Anna, according to El Dias' Rivera correspondent. The belief generally expressed along the border was that the São Paulo revolt would get the support of many states.

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, July 10 (U. P.).—The revolt of two army battalions in São Paulo was announced tonight in an official communique, which added that the federal government retained complete control of the situation.

The revolt began yesterday in the São Paulo garrison, the communique said, and only two batallions were affected.

It was learned the São Paulo outbreak followed divergences of opinion between Gen. Klinger and Gen. Leite de Castro, minister of war, regarding political activities of army lieutenants.

Leaflets signed by the leaders of the Republican Paulista party were distributed in the streets of São Paulo last night. Some members of the party joined with disaffected officers and imprisoned a number of army officers in the garrison and distributed arms to some civilians.

The federal government immediately communicated with garrisons throughout the country in order to isolate the movement to São Paulo.

Messages of support were received from Federal Interventor Gen. Flores da Cunha, of the State of Rio Grande do Sul, and from Minas Geraes State.

of Akron at Goodyear Heights, damaging about 100 houses and slightly injuring Mrs. L. J. Kelly, who was cut by flying slate.

In Goodyear Heights, the damage consisted chiefly of damaged roofs, overturned garages and a few broken windows.

From Mogadore three persons were brought to Akron City hospital, where one, Franklin Davis, 17, was reported in a serious condition with head injuries and a broken leg. The others received only minor hurts. No one was killed.

The storm roared away from Mogadore to the southeast in the direction of Wingfoot Lake, blimp base of the Goodyear air fleet, but no damage was reported.

Man Admits Strangling Bride, Trying Suicide

Los Angeles, July 10 (A.P.).—Police said today Shizuo Hanamoto, 30, Japanese gardener, had confessed he strangled his 19-year-old bride, cut himself deeply in the throat and abdomen and then drove his motor car at such a pace he struck Mrs. Bertha Koerner, 62, inflicting injuries from which she may die.

Hanamoto said fear that he was losing his mind led him to kill his wife as she slept and attempt hara kiri. He said he was seeking to crash his car when it went over a curb and struck Mrs. Koerner. She suffered a skull fracture and internal injuries. Physicians said they believed the gardener would recover.

Episcopal Party Cites Repeal as Big Problem

Seattle, Wash., July 10 (A.P.).—Solution of existing economic problems and repeal of prohibition were cited as the major problems of today by clergymen and laymen of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew of the Episcopal Church in national convention here.

The meeting is part of the first international Christian fellowship pilgrimage to the Orient, which will conclude with a conference at St. Paul's University, Tokyo, later this month. Prohibition may have aided a part of the people in the United States, said the Right Rev. Francis M. Taitt, Bishop of the Pennsylvania diocese, but it also brought a train of evils.

Health Expert Tells How To Be Happy Tho Hot

Kansas City, July 10 (A.P.).—Here's how to be happy in hot weather, as outlined by Dr. Calvin L. Cooper, Kansas City health director:

Keep calm—let Hoover and Roosevelt fight it out. Don't quarrel. Keep your mind occupied. Wear light, loose clothing. Eat vegetables. Sleep plenty. And be your age.

ROOSEVELT IS SILENT ON BID'S REJECTION

Goes to New York City and Leaves This Morning on Boat Trip.

Hyde Park, N. Y., July 10 (A.P.).—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt had no comment to make tonight on President Hoover's rejection of a St. Lawrence waterways conference.

The President's telegram expressing the belief that a personal meeting of the two was not necessary was read to Mr. Roosevelt, who said he had not yet received the message, and would have nothing to say tonight anyway.

The Democratic presidential candidate was reached just before leaving Hyde Park for New York City.

The governor proposed the conference yesterday to settle a dispute between New York State and the Federal Government over the St. Lawrence power development project.

Elliott Won't Make Trip.

Tomorrow morning the Democratic presidential nominee will go aboard a 40-foot yawl at Port Jefferson on Long Island. The anchor will be lifted before noon. The boat, Myst II, a sailing craft, is expected to cross Long Island Sound the first day and reach a point near New Haven, Conn.

Elliott, the governor's second son, is unable to make the trip. Mr. Roosevelt's other sons, James, Franklin, jr., and John, will accompany him on the cruise, which is intended to end at Portsmouth, N. H., next Saturday.

Before diplomatic regulations can be satisfied it will be necessary for New York State and the Federal Government to agree on the amount the State will pay toward the St. Lawrence work. The State Department suggested $150,000,000, which Mr. Roosevelt and his power authority regard as too high.

Held Defeating Aim.

They hold such a capital investment by the State would defeat the intention of the State-owned and developed program, which is cheaper light and power rates for New York consumers.

When the power authority, the State body in charge of the Massena Point project, informed Mr. Roosevelt that the State Department had told its final decision on agreement with the State was in Mr. Hoover's hands, the governor quickly asked for a personal conference to adjust the differences.

The issue might be carried over into the campaign, with Mr. Roosevelt advocating Government development of power sites and Mr. Hoover taking the opposite position that private development is desirable.

Political Issue Seen.

Roosevelt observers see a distinct political issue in the St. Lawrence controversy. It is pointed out that if treaty negotiations are completed this summer, Mr. Roosevelt can point to the Massena Point project as a practical demonstration of his contention that State operated electric plants are feasible.

On the other hand, it is said on the Hoover side that if the treaty is negotiated for a St. Lawrence waterway program, Mr. Hoover can argue that that plank of his 1928 platform is completed. The Midwest grain States have demanded development of the St. Lawrence waterway as an outlet for their commerce.

62 Dissent From Wet Body's Roosevelt Stand

New York, July 10 (A.P.).—Sixty-two members, including such socially prominent persons as Mrs. August Belmont, Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt and Mrs. George E. Baker, expressed public disagreement today with the action of the executive committee of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform indorsing Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Asserting that the step turned a nonpartisan organization into a partisan group their statement said, "such a course destroys the usefulness of the organization before the attainment of the object for which it was founded."

Mayor Hague Planning Roosevelt Celebration

New York, July 10 (A.P.).—The Times says Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, stanch Smith backer, plans to give his support to the Roosevelt candidacy in a State-wide demonstration at Seagirt, N. J., about the middle of August.

"Gov. Roosevelt will be present," continues the Times, "and it is the intention of Mayor Hague to make Roosevelt day in New Jersey this year even more of a demonstration than was Smith day in 1928, when more than 100,000 Democrats gathered at Seagirt to ratify the nomination of Alfred E. Smith for President."

Reporters Rent Marcon To Follow Roosevelt

New York, July 10 (U.P.).—The 85-foot yacht Marcon, which Col. Charles A. Lindbergh utilized to hunt the phantom kidnapers of his son, was prepared tonight to trail Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt on his ocean cruise this week.

The boat was rented by newspapermen assigned to cover the cruise. The Marcon will remain at least 2 miles behind Roosevelt's yawl throughout the trip. It is owned by Col. John Consolvo, Baltimore hotel owner.

MARTINEZ CREDITED IN AVERTING REVOLT

His Loyal Attitude During Previous Uprising Told by Powers' Agents.

Safety of American investments in Central and South America has been seriously affected by the spread of socialistic and communistic movements similar to the outbreak in Peru, which was repressed by Gen. Sanchez Cerro on Friday. Sporadic movements at confiscatory measures have been attempted before and since the experiment of Carlos G. Davila in Chile.

Cuba, Mexico and El Salvador have been at various times disturbed by communistic outbreaks even before the Chilean outbreak. Gen. Maximiliano Hernandez Martinez, president of El Salvador, has effectively prevented a repetition of the outbreak of last January when appeals were broadcast to Salvadorean "peasants, workers and soldiers" to join the Communist revolution.

Gen. Martinez succeeded to the presidency after the flight of President Araujo to a neighboring state. The State Department subsequently declined to recognize the government of Gen. Martinez on the grounds that he had been implicated in the revolution which overthrew Araujo.

Loyalty Assurances.

Since then, however, formal assurances have been given by the British and French charges d'affaires in San Salvador of the loyal attitude of Gen. Martinez. The Spanish minister, Fausto Navarro, made a similar declaration and since then the Honduran and Costa Rican ministers and the Nicaraguan consul general have done likewise.

The letter of the British charge d'affaires recently revealed the stand of Gen. Martinez. The statement was made to the Salvadorean minister of foreign affairs, Dr. Miguel Angel Araujo, by D. J. Rodgers, the British charge:

"I have pleasure in replying to your note and beg to say for your personal information that when various members of the diplomatic corps went together to the Zapote on December 3 last, they were informed that Gen. Martinez was a prisoner there and I accordingly formed the personal impression, like my colleagues, I believe, that he was not a party to the movement."

Gen. Martinez was a member of the cabinet as vice president and minister of war. At the outbreak of the movement he was captured and imprisoned and only released after the president had fled the country. In accordance with the Salvadorean constitution he then acceded to the presidency.

French Official's Letter.

The letter of the French charge was as follows:

"I have no objection to stating that at my interviews with the military directorate and with Gen. Martinez at the fortress of El Zapote, on December 3 and 4 last, everything induced me to believe that Gen. Martinez was held prisoner by the directorate and that his whole attitude presented him as being unconnected with the military movement of December last which overthrew President Araujo."

The Spanish minister declared:

"I am pleased * * * to state that my impression concerning the events of December 2 last, is that Gen. Martinez was unconnected with the insurrectional movement of the date indicated and that on the first visit made by the diplomatic corps to the barracks of El Zapote we did not see the general, who, we were informed, was under arrest."

The statements of the Nicaraguan, Costa Rican and Honduran diplomats were even more categoric.

Slain Police Head Buried.

Havana, Cuba, July 10 (A.P.).—A vigorous campaign against terrorism was demanded by Rafael Carrera, chief of the national police, today in an oration at the funeral of Capt. Miguel Calvo and two other policemen who were assassinated yesterday. No trace had been found of the five assailants who killed Capt. Calvo, head of Cuba's secret police, and his companions while they were riding in an automobile in one of Havana's main streets.

Santiago, Chile, July 10 (A.P.).—Carlos G. Davila, acting president of Chile, took up his official residence in the presidential palace today while former President Carlos Ibanez, who returned last week from exile, moved out to a suburb of Santiago. Victim of Young Killer To Get Military Burial

Toledo, Ohio, July 10 (A.P.).—While authorities of several Midwestern States were searching for James Storey, 22, of St. Paul, Minn., who shot and killed Marshal Jay N. Davis, 35, of North Baltimore, Ohio, and seriously wounded Dr. Martin Larkin, 34, Toledo physician, Friday night, officials of North Baltimore, Wood County, and surrounding towns today were preparing a hero's burial for the slain officer.

Marshal Davis, who was one of the first North Baltimore residents to enlist in the World War, will be accorded a full military burial at 2 p. m. tomorrow. Officials of several counties will join the funeral procession, which will be in charge of the American Legion.

NEW PLEA ON DEBTS DELAYED BY EUROPE

pression, we trust that by this evidence of our desire to assist we shall have contributed to the good will which is so necessary in the solution of this major question."

Recent Overtures Made.

Over the period of the last month overtures have been made here by the diplomats of continental Europe with regard to the most propitious moment for bringing the subject of debts to the attention of this Government again. The language of Congress has been pointedly referred to them by Secretary Stimson and they have gone away with the definite impression that nothing further can be done until Congress has demonstrated a more conciliating attitude with regard to European debts.

In the minds of foreign diplomats here the feeling is current that the outcome of the elections in November will afford them the definite basis upon which to begin a definite debt policy. The Democratic platform with its specific and ironbound plank forbidding any revamping of intergovernmental debts caused pain and surprise in those foreign circles where more favorable consideratoin was hoped for. The Republican platform this year maintains a silence on the subject which is scarcely more encouraging.

Hope for Change in Views.

The hope of America's debtors abroad is in a Congress that will be disposed to reconsider the entire subject of war debts in a more conciliating mood. The nations who have met at Geneva in a discussion of world disarmament have it in their power to make a gesture to conciliate the next Congress, whatever its intransigence. That is in complete acceptance of the project of President Hoover for a one-third reduction of national armament budgets.

A more personal reason for the postponement of the intergovernmental debt discussion is in the desire of several European diplomats to return to their own countries to review personally the entire subject with their foreign ministries in anticipation of a debt advance after the elections. British Ambassador Sir Ronald Lindsay plans to return to London for a month in August, French Ambassador Claudel may do likewise and Polish Ambassador Filipowicz has already left.

SESSION HEADS TALK ON "RURAL BILLION"

Importance Politically and Economically Stressed at Public Affairs Parley.

Charlottesville, Va., July 10 (A.P.).—The economic, political, humanitarian and religious importance of the rural half of the world's population, estimated at 1,000,000,000, as well as their importance from sheer weight of numbers, was stressed here tonight in an address by Kenyon L. Butterfield, of the International Missionary Council, of New York.

This problem of the "rural billion," he said, is one which has never before received adequate attention, but which is now attracting the notice of students, publicists and statesmen. "It is the problem of attempting to erect, alongside of a civilization that is increasingly industrial and urban, an adequate civilization for those who till the soil and live in rural environment."

Mr. Butterfield was the principal speaker at tonight's session of the University Institute of Public Affairs.

From the economic viewpoint, he said, it is of course a platitude to assert that but for them the world would starve. "But there is another feature of the economic importance of rural folk that is only now beginning to attract notice. These rural masses have been meager consumers. If their income could be increased only ten dollars per year per capita, the total demand would constitute an enormous outlet for manufactured products."

The speaker cited the many instances of political stirring among the masses of many nations in recent years, and said the "history of the next century or two will be filled with incidents that revolve around the strivings of these multitudes."

3 Dead, Many Hurt In German Rioting

Policeman Killed in Clash With Communists at Bremen.

Berlin, July 10 (A.P.).—Political riots claimed three victims slain and many wounded in Germany today. A policeman was killed and another was stabbed in a clash with Communists at Bremen, and a National Socialist was shot dead in a fight with Communists at Duisburg.

A Republican Reichsbannerman was killed at Eckernfoerde in an encounter with National Socialists, in which many were wounded by bullets.

Five persons were seriously wounded when unidentified individuals shot into a Nazi procession at Neustadt. Further skirmishes with a number more or less seriously injured were reported at Hagenow, Clausdorf, Dessau and other places. Nine were seriously wounded at Duisburg in the fighting between National Socialists and Communists, who erected barricades.

50 Are Injured in Bombay Riot.

Bombay, July 10 (A.P.).—Fifty persons were injured today in a riot which broke up a meeting of the All-India Depressed Classes Conference. The trouble began when a faction which demands a separate electorate for the depressed classes was ejected by another group.

WORLD FLIERS PLAN FOR SECOND EFFORT

Arrive in Moscow and Will Return Home Soon; "Tough Break," They Say.

Moscow, July 10 (A.P.).—Dirty, weary and disappointed, James Mattern and Bennett Griffin stepped off a train here today, shook hands with a few fellow countrymen and streaked for a bathtub.

A little later, with most of their grime scrubbed off, they told of the wreck of their round-the-world flight ambition in a Russian peat bog, and of their determination to try it again, if not this summer, certainly next year.

"We got a tough break, that's all," they said. "We're going home as soon as we can, but we'll tackle it again this year if it's not too late; certainly next summer if we can get a plane."

It developed that Mattern was piloting when the Century of Progress, booming over western Russia between Berlin and Moscow, began misbehaving. Something went wrong with the steering gear, but it wasn't serious.

"So I looked around," said Mattern, "and I hollered back to Griff that we were coming down. I knew we could fix things in a couple of minutes, and there was a good spot to land right underneath us.

Nosed Over in Muck.

"I thought it was a good spot, but you can't always tell when it's dark. It turned out to be that peat bog, and if it hadn't been for that soft ground we'd be a long way from here now."

But when they landed the wheels dug into the muck and the Century of Progress nosed over with her wheels in the air.

"As soon as she began to sink into the swamp I knew I'd guessed wrong," said Mattern. "I gave her the gun, but it was too late. Next thing we knew we'd nosed over and there I was, pinned in with the motor jammed up 2 inches from my knees.

"We were both kind of dazed, but Griff yanked me out and we crawled on one of the wings to recover from the shock. It seemed like we lay there a couple of hours, but it was really only a few minutes before help came.

"It was a blasted shame the ship had to go like that. She was one swell piece of machinery."

Griffin took up the story:

Making Good Time.

"We were making such good time," said he, "we fooled ourselves. We never really thought we'd beat the Post-Gatty time until after we passed Moscow, but we were several hours ahead of them when we cracked up."

Griffin had a black eye and a strip of adhesive plaster over a cut on his forehead. Mattern said all he collected was some bruises.

The two Americans left Berlin in such a hurry, it was disclosed, that they neglected to get an official visa for entry into Russia.

They had expected that some one would meet them at Berlin with the papers, but when the Soviet agent didn't appear they took off anyway. Government officials said today that the failure to comply with the formalities would not cause the fliers any embarrassment.

160-YEAR-OLD "PIG" FOUND IN RIVER

WILLIAM HOLT GALE BURIED IN ARLINGTON

Retired Consular Officer Died in Rome on April 25 of Pneumonia.

William Holt Gale, retired officer of the consular service, who died in Rome on April 25, was buried in Arlington Cemetery with full military honors Saturday. Mr. Gale, who was born in New York City in 1864, died of pneumonia after a long illness.

Mr. Gale served with the Rough Riders in Cuba, being wounded twice and receiving the Distinguished Service Medal. He was then first secretary of Puerto Rico when this country took it over. In 1906 he entered the consular service, being stationed in Denmark, Greece, China and other countries and representing this country at the court of Bavaria during the early part of the World War. He was called to Panama to help entertain the foreign fleets when the canal was opened and was a passenger on the first ship to go through the canal.

In 1905 Mr. Gale married Miss Corinne Blackburn, daughter of the former senator from Kentucky, who is his only survivor. After his death in Rome, his body rested in a chapel there through the courtesy of the Italian government. Later his widow returned it to this country for burial at Arlington. While in Bavaria he established and operated a hospital for Americans who were wounded while serving with the allied forces. Mrs. Gale is well known in Washington, where she lived for some time prior to her marriage. Mr. Gale, at the time of his retirement in 1929, was consul general and minister-resident in Budapest.

GILLETTE, INVENTOR OF BLADE, DIES AT 77

Famous Safety Razor Maker Succumbs to Lingering Intestinal Malady.

Los Angeles, July 10 (A.P.).—King Camp Gillette, who perfected the double-edged safety razor blade to brighten the shaver's morning, is dead at the age of 77.

The inventor and manufacturer succumbed late last night after undergoing several operations in the last two years for an intestinal malady. His wife, Mrs. Alanta E. Gillette, and their son, King G. Gillette, were at the bedside in their ranch home 50 miles from here.

Mr. Gillette's condition had been serious, but death was unexpected.

He came to California nearly 20 years ago from Boston, where he organized the Gillette Safety Razor Co., in 1901. His Los Angeles realty transactions were among the largest ever recorded here.

Educated in Chicago.

Educated in Chicago, Mr. Gillette became a salesman and later London branch manager for a bottle-stopper company. After conceiving the thin, sharp blade to overcome the task of straight-edged shaving, he devoted five years to evolving a holder. In this he enlisted the aid of William E. Nickerson, Massachusetts Institute of Technology instructor, whose mechanical ability helped start the company's Boston plant.

The razor was launched as a commercial product in 1903. Only 51 sets were sold that year, but annual sales of as many as 15,000,000 razors and 1,000,000,000 blades bespoke the shavers' eventual reaction. The inventor's picture, printed on the packages, became known wherever men eschew beards.

Father Also Inventor.

Mr. Gillette was born in Fond du Lac, Wis., January 5, 1855. His father, George Wolcott Gillette, was an inventor before him. His mother wrote "The White House Cook Book."

Mrs. Gillette's father, Alanson Gaines, was a Willoughby, Ohio, oil magnate. They married in 1903.

Mr. Gillette was the author of several books on political economy.

Funeral services were tentatively arranged for Wednesday at 11 a. m., at Forest Lawn Memorial Park here.

His son said the services would be private.

WARTIME CRITICISM OF PERSHING BARED

Lloyd George Said American Army Useless, Letter by Baker Reveals.

New York, July 10 (A.P.).—Newton D. Baker, President Wilson's Secretary of War, has revealed that David Lloyd George, then Premier of Great Britain, at one time apparently desired the removal of Gen. John J. Pershing as commander in chief of the American Expeditionary Force in the World War.

In a letter to Col. Lloyd C. Griscom, former liaison officer between Gen. Pershing and the British war office, Mr. Baker wrote that the war-time premier complained the American Army was "perfectly useless" to the British forces and was on the verge of asking for Gen. Pershing's recall.

Col. Griscom, now publisher of the Nassau Daily Star, commented in that newspaper: "That Mr. Lloyd George failed actually to make this demand was perhaps due to the spirited and masterly manner in which Mr. Baker met the first onslaught."

Mr. Baker replied that from his own observation on the front lines he was convinced that the American troops were at least detaining that many German divisions which might otherwise be added to the concentration against the French and British.

He countered with an offer to discontinue the transportation of American soldiers on British ships and move only such forces as could be carried on American vessels. The premier changed the subject and the matter was not discussed again.

The next morning, Mr. Baker recalled, Lord Reading, former viceroy to India, said with "diplomatic casualness" that Mr. Lloyd George "asked me to say to you that you should think no more about the matter which he raised for discussion last night at dinner."

YOUNG PLAN DEAD, EXPERT DECLARES

Europe Takes First Great Step Toward Recovery, Bankers Declare.

Basel, Switzerland, July 10 (A.P.).—Machinery was set in motion today to carry out the reparations agreement reached at Lausanne as the governors of the central banks at a meeting of the Bank for International Settlements declared that Europe had taken the first great step toward world recovery.

The Bank for International Settlements, as trustee of the German bond issue of 3,000,000,000 gold marks (approximately $712,500,000) which is the kernel of the settlement, is proceeding as if a "gentlemen's agreement," which technically might cause reversion of the Young plan, did not exist.

"The gentlemen's agreement means nothing," said one authority. "The Young plan is dead and Europe must act on that basis. Canada alone ratified the Hoover moratorium (which suspended reparation and war debt payments for one year), but it was nevertheless executed faithfully."

There was nothing in the reparations agreement itself, which was initialed yesterday by delegates of the leading powers at Lausanne, about a "gentlemen's agreement" linking reparations with war debts.

Must Be Ratified.

The treaty does not go into effect, however, until it is ratified by the parliaments of the initialing countries Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Belgium and Japan—which, by an unwritten agreement, will not take place until after the United States reconsiders the question of scaling down the war debts due her from Europe.

Officials were reluctant to discuss the "gentlemen's agreement," which was not made public, but it was understood that a memorandum concerning it was circulated to remind the parties to it of the agreement and that a copy was sent to Germany.

The Central Bank governors of the various powers decided that the bank for international settlements should assume the tasks provided for by the Lausanne conference.

Extension of Moratorium.

The agreement included resolutions providing for conditional measures extending a moratorium on intergovernmental debts, an agreement to assist Austria and the Danubian states which are in financial difficulties, creation of a committee to study the grain problem in the Danubian states which are embarrassed by a huge grain surplus and creation of machinery for a world economic conference under the auspices of the League of Nations.

Committees of the proposed world economic conference are expected to begin functioning within three weeks, with late August or early September mentioned as a likely time for the conference, to which the United States would be invited.

FRENCH INSIST U. S. CUT EUROPE'S DEBTS

everything else is dependent upon the final vote of the Parliament."

Herriot was enthusiastic over the "spirit of cordiality" and the cooperation of other nations in arriving at a definite agreement.

The premier was tired to the point of exhaustion when he reached Paris, but he had no time to rest. The political situation demanded his plunging immediately into his compaign to meet a vigorous onslaught in the Chamber of Deputies tomorrow against his budget proposals.

Stiff opposition is expected to rise against Herriot's attempt to balance a four-billion franc budget, and at the same time effect heavy savings in government departments. The greatest sum allowed by the chamber's finance committee is three billion francs, and the difference must be reconciled, if possible.

The finance committee already has created one extremely sore point, by adopting a recommendation of Leon Blum for suppression of this year's annual army maneuvers and the training period for the reserves. This would effect a saving of 120,000,000 francs.

The committee also has agreed to an increased tax on coffee, to raise 300,000,000 francs, and other increases totaling 625,000,000 francs. This figure still leaves prospective income 1,274,000,000 francs below the government's budget demands.

Among other proposals accepted by the committee was one providing for a 5 per cent cut in the salaries of President Lebrun and all cabinet members. The salary cut does not apply, however, to members of the Senate or Chamber of Deputies.

Verdict of Jurors Mourned by Aimee

Evangelist Injures Head in Fall on Receiving News About Suit.

Lake Elsinore, Calif., July 10 (A.P.).—Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton lay prostrated in her mountain lodge near here today, mourning a verdict against her chubby husband, David Hutton, in Myrtle St. Pierre's breach of promise suit.

To her serious illness was added the shock of a fall last night when she fainted on receiving word a jury had found Hutton guilty of Miss St. Pierre's sensational charges by awarding her $5,000 of the $200,000 demanded. Mrs. Hutton's head struck the cement porch of the lodge and she received a slight brain concussion.

Hutton, with several personal friends, took a dip in the swimming pool, directed two guards in keeping visitors out of the fenced yard, and breathed defiance against any movement to oust him from his wife's famous Angelus Temple of Los Angeles.

8 a. m.—Had difficulty hoisting mainsheet. Found this due to entanglement of two press photographers in sheet.

8:10—Raised jib and three news association scouts fell out.

8:30—Finally weighed anchor. Steered way out of harbor through flotilla of newspaper writers with great difficulty.

9 a. m.—Got into open water and lay course east-a-half-south through a bobbing sea of carerama.

10 a. m.—Wind falling rapidly.

10:30 a. m.—Now in dead calm can't make any headway. May have to appeal to McAdoo and Connally.

11 a. m.—Drifting idly. Not a breath of air anywhere. Where is Jim Foley? Spent entire day becalmed. Heard hollow laughter off starboard beam. My boys think it sounded like Al Smith.

TUES.—Got under way in sudden southerly wind at 5:30. Newspaper flotilla highly indignant.

6 a. m.—I went to galley to prepare breakfast and found two political reporters in the ice box. Cooked them with green peas. The peas were good.

Senator Shipstead Warns Against Debt Cancellation

Aroused by reports from Europe indicating the possibility that the reduction in German reparations announced last week was conditional upon reduction by the United States of debts owed to this country, Senator Henrik Shipstead last night issued the following statement:

"Such an arrangement, if agreed to by the United States, would mean that the war tribute levied on Germany would be paid by the taxpayers of the United States.

"The tribute or reparations is a dishonest greed forced on a disarmed foe in violation of the plans of the armistice and the assumption that Germany was solely guilty of bringing on the war.

"The debts owed to us are honest debts on money borrow from us after the war.

"I have a resolution pending in the Senate for cancellation of the debts only after the European governments have agreed to a progressive annual reduction of military and naval armaments totaling 40 per cent within 40 years and abolishment of conscription for 30 years.

"Such an arrangement we could afford to agree to because we could save in military and naval expenses many times more than is owed to us, and insure peace for at least 30 years.

"Such an arrangement would give security to all nations, restore confidence, international credit and trade.

"If any official of the United States Government has promised foreign agents that we would cancel debts owed to us for cancellation of reparations he is very near treason to the United States and certainly is guilty of swindling foreign governments."

NEVADA ALONE ADDS TO HER U.S. REVENUE

States' Total Shows Decline of 35 Per Cent for Last Year.

(Associated Press.)

Nevada alone of all the States paid more into Uncle Sam's coffers last fiscal year than in the previous year.

This was revealed yesterday in the Internal Revenue Bureau's statement of revenues, which showed a net decline of about 35 per cent for 1932 as compared with the previous year. Receipts of $1,554,233,363 in 1932 compared with $2,428,228,754, or a decline of $873,995,391. As against this combined figure, Nevada returned $1,346,632 in revenues during the last fiscal year, as compared with $1,346,061, an increase of $270.

The six districts comprising the State of New York returned more than 25 per cent of all internal revenue during the year, their remittances amounting to $394,627,449. The State paid almost a third of the corporation taxes, or $205,419,436 as compared with total receipts of $629,603,704 from this source. Approximately 33 per cent of all income taxes was realized from there, namely, $143,183,958, as compared with total income tax receipts of $427,275,626.

New York dropped far behind North Carolina, however, in miscellaneous taxes, the Southern State with its large tobacco factories paying $219,674,749, or approximately 40 per cent of the $497,354,033 miscellaneous taxes received by the Government.

North Carolina, by virtue of its heavy miscellaneous remittances, stood second on the State list of revenue producers, accounting for $231,139,698 during the year. Pennsylvania returned $109,394,923 from all districts, Illinois, $106,702,753, and Virginia, $99,968,361.

The greatest comparative declines were shown by Arizona and Colorado. The former returned $927,331 in the fiscal year 1932 as compared with $2,262,620 the year before, and Colorado remitted $5,394,360 as compared with $15,667,230 in 1931.

The internal revenue receipts by districts for the past two fiscal years include: Maryland and District of Columbia, $31,940,729 for 1932, as compared with $44,858,402 for 1931.

Woman Hurt in Crash On Baltimore Highway

Mrs. Emma Burtogt, 55 years old, of Renton, Pa., received severe lacerations to the head when an automobile in which she was riding was sidewiped by another car on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard near Beltsville, Md. The second car failed to stop.

Her daughter, Mrs. J. Nicholson, also of Renton, Pa., was treated for shock at Providence Hospital. They were given emergency treatment by the Riverdale and Bladensburg units of the Prince Georges rescue squad. The car was operated by Mr. Nicholson.

Clara Bow to Produce Own Film in Comeback

Hollywood, July 10 (A.P.).—Clara Bow, erstwhile "it" girl of screendom, came to town today from the California-Nevada ranch home of her husband, Rex Bell, and announced she planned to become a motion picture director, producing a film starring her husband.

But before that, she said, she herself will star in a "comeback" picture, work on which is to be started early in August.

How to Be Beautiful

By ELSIE PIERCE

MOTHERS, HERE ARE SOME HINTS FOR DAUGHTER GOING CAMPING.

MANY mothers whose daughters are fortunate enough to be able to spend the entire summer, or part of the summer, at a camp have written asking for helpful health and beauty hints.

If daughter is to spend a day or so in some nearby woods, very little equipment is necessary. But if she is to spend several weeks away from home, it is advisable to go to a reliable camp of good standing, one with a competent staff, and let the camp director tell you exactly what equipment is essential. Don't overburden your young daughter with too much and don't spend any unnecessary money.

Health Measures.

Now for the health and beauty measures that directly concern us. First, be sure that sanitation is strictly observed and that the water both for drinking and bathing purposes is clear and free from pollution. If your daughter is to be on her own, she should be particularly careful about the drinking water and if there is the least doubt about its purity it is best to boil, cool it and then pour it back and forth from bucket to bucket to aerate it before drinking. This is a good way to prevent a dead, unpleasant taste, too.

As for the clothes, simple, washable garments are the only sensible things to take to camp. Undergarments should be especially easy to wash and should not be the too flimsy kind. If necessary they should stand the "gaff" of being hung up on a branch of a tree to dry. Outer garments should be sturdy, too, and not catch on every twig passed when hiking through woods. Shoes are very important and only the most sensible shoes should be chosen; long enough and wide enough and a low, flat, wide heel. Picture a young miss in high heeled shoes, silk hose, chiffon gown, attempting to rough it as our ancestors did. Looks silly and uncomfortable, doesn't it? It is. Yet the untutored young miss may yearn for these pretty-pretties most.

Check up on the children, just as father does on his car before a motor trip. Ingrown toe nails and corns are painful and not to be meddled with by one who does not know. A visit to the chiropodist may be needed. And be sure to have a dentist check up. This is especially important. Don't run the risk of having an emergency toothache spoil daughter's vacation.

For the beauty equipment I would suggest a simple kit with a good toothbrush (or two), hairbrush, wash cloth or bath brush, some good bland soap, and a bottle of fine quality olive or ready-prepared antisunburn oil. Teach your daughter the importance of hygiene, of cleanliness and simple common sense beauty habits and imbue a definite pride in her appearance so she will not "let down" even while roughing it; but keep her hair brushed, her skin clean and her beauty at its best always.

Whether daughter is camping at seashore, or home, my schedule called "A Young Girl's Beauty Rites" will help her to form the daily beauty habit. Send self-addressed, stamped envelope for it.

Elsie Pierce

Elsie Pierce, famous beauty lecturer, will answer any questions on beauty you wish to ask her. Address Miss Pierce, in care of The Washington Post, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

DREAMS.

A FLOCK of ducklings about 2 weeks old are seen catching insects for the evening meal. They dart rapidly, first in one direction and then in another. No duckling keeps the same speed or the same direction for more than a foot. As these ducklings run, so run dreams. First in one direction, then in another; first fast, then slow; first after one bug, then after another.

The bugs they are after are generally pretty close at hand. If a dreamer's feet are cold his dreams are likely to relate to cold feet or wet ones, or to some kind of exposure of the feet. Or, the connection with the material may not be quite so plain. The sensation of discomfort may start one to dreaming about other discomforts or disagreeable experiences of some sort.

One kicks off a cover and a leg is bared. The duckling races after a bug in that direction. The dreams may relate to going down the street undressed, or dropping one's trousers while dancing, or some other experience of similar kind.

The cover is too heavy, the temperature of the body starts up, and sweating begins. The dreams run to close quarters, tight places, insufficient air.

Many dreams are due to physiological causes. Some of the organs in which excretions accumulate become overfilled. The irritation of the organ walls extends to nearby structures. A line of dreams, excited by this set of causes, is set in operation.

One goes to bed without having had supper. During the night hunger registers on the dreaming mind. The dream thoughts are likely to run on foods and eating. One sleeps with the mouth open and snores. Since there is obstruction to free breathing, the dreams are likely to run on oppression of some sort, or the dryness of the mouth may cause dreams of thirst or drinking.

A light is turned on in the room. It is not bright enough to completely capture attention and awaken the sleeper, but some parts of the rays get through the lids and excite the optic nerve somewhat. The dreams are apt to relate to light or fire.

There is a noise within hearing. It is not violent enough to awaken the sleeper. It starts a line of dreams in which the sound plays a part. They may deal with noises and sounds or, if the attention was captured to a considerable degree and the mind was pulled well toward the awakening level, the dreams may be related to the cause of the noise or some cause of a noise rather than to the noise itself.

Since an undue proportion of our dreams are excited into performance by unpleasant impressions, it follows that an undue proportion of them deal with frustrations and limitations. But when one lies completely at ease in a comfortable bed the dreams are liable to run along pleasant lines.

EDEMA.

M. P. R. writes: Will you tell about edema, its cause and cure? I was put to bed in February with weakened heart and soon edema began to trouble. I am 62 years old and never had a touch of it before. We got rid of it for a short while, but it has reappeared and seems very persistent now.

REPLY.

In your case edema is the result of heart disease with weakened compensation. Your heart muscle is unequal to the job of keeping your blood circulation on schedule. Fluid accumulates in your tissues because of the slow return current in your veins. Your doctor put you to bed hoping that that would speed up your vein circulation and make the work of your heart muscle easier. He can give you drugs that will empty the excess water from your tissues, but to give you prolonged relief he must build up your heart muscle.

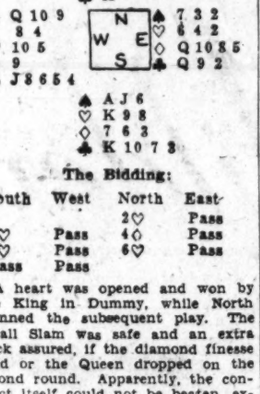
INSURING SAFETY.

IN planning the play of the hand, the Declarer frequently finds it necessary to assume the best possible distribution of a suit in order to insure the contract. However, when the cards are such as to permit the safe making of the contract, even though the distribution of the cards in the suit adversely held is extremely bad, the Declarer should safeguard the play by protective measures against the unexpected and unusual.

The manner in which Mrs. Bertha Maguire, of Trenton, Ontario, safeguarded the making of a Slam on the hand below, played at the Cavendish Club in Toronto, is interesting. Mrs. Maguire sat North.

North—Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The Bidding:

South	West	North	East
		2♡	Pass
3♡	Pass	4◇	Pass
5♡	Pass	6♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

A heart was opened and won by the King in Dummy, while North planned the subsequent play. The Small Slam was safe and an extra trick assured, if the diamond finesse held or the Queen dropped on the second round. Apparently, the contract itself could not be beaten, except against unusual distribution. "But why," Mrs. Maguire asked herself, "had East led a trump?" Possibly because he held four diamonds to the Queen.

In order to safeguard against this contingency, Mrs. Maguire led a small diamond from the Dummy, which she won with the Ace in her own hand. She then entered Dummy with a spade, and led another round of diamonds. As she had feared, West ruffed, but her contract was assured.

Many players would have drawn two rounds of trumps and thus have met defeat on an apparently unbeatable hand.

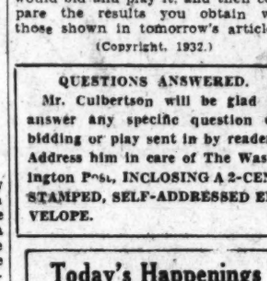
TODAY'S POINTER.

When the strength of the hand is such as to permit guarding against the most unfavorable distribution, the Declarer should plan his play to meet any contingency that may arise. If favorable distribution must be assumed to permit the making of a contract, then any danger incident to freakish adverse holdings must be risked.

TOMORROW'S HAND.

The bidding and play of the hand printed below will be discussed tomorrow:

North—Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



Study the hand, decide how you would bid and play it, and then compare the results you obtain with those shown in tomorrow's article.

Fifth Avenue Fashions

THE easy to wear wrap-over type dress needs no introduction. It is accepted by all women of good taste for its smart slimming qualities.

As well as for youthful and normal figures, this model is delightful for more matronly ones.

The skirt snugs the hips and creates a lengthened line through the inset panel at the center-front. The neckline is exceptionally becoming.

Printed tub silk in novelty dot pattern in blue and white is an economical choice.

Cotton mesh, pique and sportsweight linen are cool and lovely for all summer wear.

Style No. 2753 may be had in sizes 16, 18 years, 36, 38, 40 and 42-inches bust. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards of 39-inch material with ½ yard of 35-inch contrasting. Price of pattern 15 cents.

Our new Fashion Magazine points the way to better dress and economy. You can save $10 by sending 10 cents for this book to Fashion Department, The Washington Post, Fifth avenue and Twenty-third street, New York City.

Interpreting the Mode

By DARE

A discreetly chic summer coat of black wool shows an epaulette shoulder effect which follows the incrustations of the front of the bodice. (Courtesy of the Maison Heim, Paris.)

NEW YORK, July 10.—Have you a little underskirt in your wardrobe? Better have! Better have two or three—four or five, better! Because one has to remember that the new mesh fabrics, whether they be woolen or cotton, are more transparent than chiffon, honestly.

Summer underskirts or costume slips are a problem, and that I admit. The wrap-around ones seem, at first thought and on first glance, to be perfect—but they simply aren't there when it comes to wearability. The wrap-around skirt is something else again—one can adjust this when sitting and standing and walking. But one can not adjust the underskirt, under a straight frock, especially so I for one simply do not like wrap-around slips. They are less trouble for the very slim, which I ain't—as I have often told you. But for the lady with hips, no wrap-around underskirt!

Well, then what? The flared skirt, which fits nicely over the hips, is good. And of course the bias underslip is perfect, almost. But both have to depend upon the type of gown with which they are worn, you see.

An elegant woman will have a costume slip or underskirt for every dress. Oh, I can hear you hoo-o-o-wil But it's true—you almost have to. Or else you have to have at least three costume slips, each of a different cut—one flared, one straight and slim with pleats at the sides for fullness, one bias. Personally, I think that the costume slip which fits the dress is the most economical in the long run, honestly—the materials are so inexpensive, you save much wear and stretching and pulling on the dress itself if the slip is cut to take the pull instead of the dress—and you are always comfortable and sure of your elegance. Think it over!

* * * *

Would you like to make yourself a smart beach bag? And hat to match it, perhaps? And even perhaps a beach dress, for variety? All most easily made from our detailed instructions, which are in this week's leaflet. Just send your stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for it—and either make one or the other of the three things it tells you how to make, or send it to your dressmaker. I think you'll like the beach hat especially, made from tailor's canvas, and very, very chic and protecting.

* * * *

Another charming example of the discreet elegance of the modern mode! Meaning, actually, the coat I sketched for you today, from Heim, in Paris. I liked the way the incrustations of the bodice stop "crusting" and make little shoulder epaulettes which broaden the shoulders a bit, don't you? Light weight black woolen material, Heim art, and Dah-ray interpretation!

* * * *

'N' just to remind you that net hose and gloves together can sometimes be mos' awfully chic—I sketched a couple—only this mesh is very wide and heavy, wide apart—one should say. And there is a time an' a place for everything, remember——!

Au revoir.

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE

"CANCER."

IF today is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8 a. m. to 9:45 a. m., from 2 p. m. to 3:40 p. m. and from 7 p. m. to 8:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 11:30 a. m. to 1 p. m. and from 5 p. m. to 6:30 p. m.

Very invigorating influences will be in force on July 11, more favorable for outdoor life and physical labor than for mental or spiritual needs. Love affairs will be hectic and social jollities apt to be noisy and in many cases foolish. More than the usual risk will be faced from fire and accident, and many a lapsed insurance policy will be the cause of futile regret.

The child born on this July 11 will always appear old for its age. It will not be particularly fond of reading the story books and fairy tales which usually enchant other children, but will have a passion for history and books of knowledge and adventure. Not many games and sports will appeal to it.

Born on July 11, you were not cast for a minor part in the universe and are capable of carrying heavy loads, especially mental ones. You will be a man or woman, who in your time, will play many parts and sip at many wells of life. Your nature is not a fanciful or imaginative one, although you like true adventure. Facts make more of an appeal to you than fiction. Your conscience is very much "on the job" and you often torment yourself with scruples. You are sound and headstrong, but fair and kind, and a person of sense.

You do not want people to always agree with you and enjoy friendly arguments. It is seldom that you get very heated over any subject or thing. You may not understand the grammar of music, but you understand its thought and feeling and have a true sense of of rhythm. You are truly democratic and do not feel or act as though subordinates belong to a different sphere. You never treat them as though they did not count.

Now and then you display twinkling signs of wit, but could not be called a very humorous or fun-loving person. You are rather a bystander in this respect.

IS it their lot to suffer cramps and backaches every month? Certainly not. The tonic effect of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has ended all that for many thousands of women.

Mrs. Schnepper's case is typical. She was always sickly. Tired. Gloomy. "Now," she says, "everywhere I go people tell me how much better I look. I feel like dancing for joy all the time."

SACRIFICE STRESSED IN CATHEDRAL TALK

Follow Christ Without Any Thought of Reward, Chaplain Urges.

"The tests of Christian discipleship lie along the road of sacrifice and endurance where one follows Christ without thought of reward or preferment," Canon Raymond L. Wolven, chaplain to the Bishop of Washington, declared in his sermon at the evensong service in Washington Cathedral yesterday afternoon. He took his text from St. Matthew 20:22—"Are ye able to drink of the cup that I shall drink of and to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with?"

Preaching to a large congregation, Canon Wolven said, in part:

"Christ never offers preferment or reward in speaking of the Kingdom. He places emphasis on the hard side of sacrifice, blows to be struck, and work to be done before men may enter the Kingdom.

Not Conclusive Evidence.

"Let us analyze what Christian discipleship means, by the familiar question and answer method. Do you know of any notable examples of this discipleship; and, if so, what makes them notable?

"Some one will say regularity in public worship—they are always to be found in church each Sunday. That is not conclusive evidence.

"Others will mention disciples who are notable for generous gifts toward all those agencies that set forward the work of Christ and His Church. But this bestowing of gifts is not necessarily conclusive evidence.

"Still others will cite profession of belief in God as illustrated by the Apostles' Creed which we chanted a moment ago. Even this is not, of necessity, proof of the highest standard of discipleship.

Not Working for Reward.

"No, my friends, our blessed Lord sweeps aside all such questions and asks us to search our hearts before we answer 'We are able' to the question propounded in my text. Discipleship is not working for a reward, but rather an opportunity to endure hardship and to make sacrifices. Paradoxical as it may seem, according to this standard, we find eternal life in death, very often victory in defeat, and we attain real supremacy by being willing to serve.

"There is a place in the kingdom for those who are willing to be 'adventurers for God' and the only peace we should look for is that which comes in the midst of a conflict when human souls are serene because they know they are on the right side."

Butler in Film Colony Believed to Be Suicide

Los Angeles, July 10 (A.P.).—A theory of suicide was given credence today by detectives investigating the death of Albert L. Erlacher, butler for George Fitzmaurice, film director. No arrests were made.

Erlacher was found shot through the heart in the main entrance of the Fitzmaurice mansion at Bel Air late last night. At his feet lay a revolver, wrapped in a dish towel. Police said investigation of a possible murder was continuing, principally on the statement of Mattie Gray, cook, that she was sitting on a bench near the entrance, heard Erlacher say, "What, you here again?" and then a shot.

Elks Honor Their War Dead at Lodge Meeting

Birmingham, Ala., July 10 (A.P.).—Elks of the Nation paid tribute today to their dead at memorial services preceding the opening tomorrow of the sixty-eighth convention of the grand lodge. Grand Exalted Ruler John R. Coen, of Sterling, Colo., spoke at the services, held at the grave of B. M. Allen, of Birmingham, a former grand exalted ruler.

Coen conferred during the day with members of his cabinet and with Floyd Thompson, of Chicago, who probably will be named to succeed him at Tuesday's election. Chicago and Milwaukee continued to dominate talk of a meeting place for next year.

Passengers Miss Grave Hurts as Plane Crashes

Sterling, Ill., July 10 (A.P.).—Dodging a terrific electrical storm, a trimotored United Air Lines plane, with five men and three women aboard, struck a high tension line at an emergency landing field here this morning, catapulted to the ground and was wrecked.

None of the passengers or ship's crew was injured seriously, due apparently to the stout walls of the all-metal cabin, which withstood the impact of the crash. The undercarriage and wings were smashed and the motors buried in the rain-soaked earth.

Number of Centenarians In U. S. Shown on Decline

(Associated Press.)

Uncle Sam is not certain how many of his people have reached the century mark in age, but as closely as he has been able to determine, the centenarians are on the decrease.

The Census Bureau yesterday announced the number of persons claiming to have passed 100 years in the 1930 counting of noses was 3,964, as compared with 4,267 in 1920, a decrease of 7.1 per cent. Of the 1930 total, 2,467 were Negroes, 1,180 whites and 317 of other races.

While reporting that only 1,005 returned 99 years as their age in 1930, the Census Bureau, with its tongue in its cheek, added:

"Because persons of advanced age sometimes knowingly report themselves to the enumerator as older than they actually are, or, not knowing their true ages, make exaggerated guesses, the returns undoubtedly overstate the number of centenarians, particularly in the Negro population."

Broker "Misled" Claire Windsor

Says Wife Will Withdraw $100,000 Balm Suit Against Actress.

San Francisco, July 10 (A.P.).—In a signed statement in the Chronicle today, Alfred C. Read, jr., young Oakland broker, admitted "misleading" Claire Windsor, blonde actress, "by not telling her I was a married man."

Miss Windsor has been sued by Read's wife, Mrs. Marian Y. Read, Oakland society matron, for $100,000 alienation of affection damages. Mrs. Read is also suing for divorce.

"You can take it from me," Read said in his statement in the Chronicle, "there will be no divorce and no trial of this alienation suit." He declared if his wife did not withdraw both actions, he would give her a "verbal spanking."

Nude Paraders Freed On Promise to Be Good

Canora, Saskatchewan, July 10 (A.P.).—Abandoning their attitude of defiance by promising to go to their homes and conduct themselves orderly in future, twoscore Doukhobors, held here as vagrants following a nude parade last week, were released today by Magistrate MacDonald, of Yorkton.

On instructions from the magistrate, Royal Canadian Mounted Police made arrangements to take the Doukhobors to their homes in the Pelly, Kamsack and Verigin districts by motor trucks.

Arrested Golfer Friend of Killer

New Lead to Members of Burke Gang Is Seen by Police.

Kansas City, July 10 (A.P.).—John J. Brennan, alias John Brown, who dubbed his shot Wednesday at a Kansas City golf course when detectives closed in to arrest two of his companions as escaped convicts, told police today he is Harvey Bailey, of Sullivan County, Mo., friend of Fred Burke.

The golf course arrest, which has already caught the attention of investigators in the Lindbergh case, the Leavenworth prison break last December, and several major robberies, thus attained new importance as a possible lead to members of the Burke gang, police said.

Bailey admitted, police reported, that he is the man who took Burke, suspected of being the trigger man in the Chicago St. Valentine's Day machine gun massacre of 1929 and then wanted for murder, bank robbery and other crimes, to the rural Missouri hideout where he was captured a year and a half ago.

SEWERAGE SYSTEM URGED IN ARLINGTON

Health Conditions Are Good, Says Dr. Chichester, but Project Is Needed.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST,
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Although Dr. P. M. Chichester, county health officer, in his annual report shows the health conditions to be excellent, he stresses the urgent need of a county-wide sewage system, so that present health standards may be maintained.

The work of his department, he says, has been greatly handicapped due to the small staff employed. He points out that the department is still carrying on the work with the same small force, although in the past few years the population has almost doubled, causing a steady increase in the number of inspections made daily by the department.

While there has not been one case of typhoid during the past fiscal year, the danger still exists, he says.

The report shows a considerable decrease in communicable diseases. During the past year there have been but eight cases of diphtheria and two carrier cases, a marked decrease over previous years.

Only two cases of infantile paralysis was reported during the year. One resulted in almost instant death. The other victim is on the road to recovery. No smallpox cases were reported.

There were nine deaths from tuberculosis, a decrease.

Building operations in Lyon Village and Lyon Park, Arlington County, by the firm of Lyon & Fitch during the past six months have far exceeded those of all of 1931, according to a report from Mr. Lyon yesterday.

During 1931, 32 homes were constructed and sold in the two sections, while during the first six months of this year 47 homes have been under construction. Of these 41 have been sold, representing a total of $307,500. Of the six unfinished one has been sold. The total of 47 will represent an outlay of $329,000. The 32 homes sold in 1931 amounted to $147,000.

Police Chase Nets Car, But Operator Escapes

A 70-mile-an-hour chase yesterday, which started on Connecticut avenue near Chevy Chase Circle and ended beyond Chevy Chase Lake, resulted in the confiscation of what is thought to be a stolen car and the escape of the driver.

Montgomery County Policeman Frank Soper, of the Bethesda substation, saw the car speeding and gave chase. Beyond Chevy Chase Lake the car was forced off the road by another automobile and onto a lot. The driver fled.

BAPTISTS TO BUILD NEW CHURCH ANNEX

Sunday School Building in Alexandria Planned at Cost of $65,000.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The First Baptist Church of Alexandria plans the erection of a new Sunday school building on South Washington street at a cost of $65,000, the school having grown in all departments to such an extent that larger and better facilities are needed. Plans have been drawn by H. L. Cain, of Richmond, and drawings of the new addition have been made and now hang in the vestibule of the church.

The old annex, adjacent to the church building, will be torn down to make room for the new addition, which will have three stories and a basement.

The general plans include 60 classrooms to take care of 1,200 scholars; separate assembly rooms for beginners, primary, junior, young people's, intermediate, senior and adult departments, and a large nursery. A social or dining hall to accommodate 500 will be used for banquets, plays and other recreational programs for both adults and young people.

There will be a library and reading rooms for church members, two large office rooms, one for the church and one for the Sunday school; dressing rooms, a large church parlor for committee meetings, and a kitchen.

The date for launching the building program has not yet been announced.

Marine Reserve Group Plans for Encampment

Company B, Twenty-third Regiment, Sixth Marine Reserve Brigade, of Alexandria, is preparing for its annual encampment at Virginia Beach August 21 to September 4.

The local company was organized in April, 1930, and now has a strength of two officers and 45 enlisted men. Since it is planned to take at least 50 men to camp this year, enlistments are now being accepted, but will close July 31.

In this High-pressure Age smokers want a Milder Cigarette

WE LIVE in a fast-moving age. We work harder . . . play harder . . . travel quicker. And we smoke more cigarettes.

But there's this about it: They have got to be milder today. In this high-pressure age, smokers don't like strong cigarettes.

About four miles of warehouses are filled with mild, ripe, Domestic tobaccos, stored away to age for two years to make them mild and mellow for CHESTERFIELD Cigarettes.

To make sure that CHESTERFIELD is a milder cigarette, the greater part of 90 million dollars is invested in the tobaccos used in CHESTERFIELD. These tobaccos are "Cross-Blended."

This "Welding" Together—or "Cross-Blending"—permits every kind of tobacco used in the CHESTERFIELD blend to partake of the best qualities of every other type. It's the same principle that Burbank used in crossing different fruits to make a still better fruit.

CHESTERFIELDS are milder . . . never harsh . . . and that's why, in this high-pressure age, more smokers, men and women, are changing to CHESTERFIELDS every day.

THE COMEDY INTERLUDE.

Congress is loath to adjourn without giving the country another demonstration of its waggishness. At the beginning of the session President Hoover asked for immediate action on his home loan bank measure to relieve millions of people who are about to lose their homes. At the tag end of the session the Senate is debating that very measure, trying to decide whether it should amalgamate relief to home owners with beer, with inflation of the currency, or with liquidation of farm mortgages. No relief is yet in sight for distressed home owners.

Senator Frazier led the procession of statesmen who marched to the front to attach irrelevant measures to the home loan measure. All the senator asked was that the Government refinance farm mortgages, lending money to land owners at a low rate of interest. He recognizes that many farms are mortgaged for more than they are worth, but is quite willing that the water in these mortgages should be squeezed out into taxpayers' pockets. After wasting many hours on this nonsense the Senate perceived that it had nothing to do with the proposed home loan banks, and therefore sent it back to committee.

Then came the Bingham beer amendment. Democrats fresh from their wettest of all conventions squirmed and writhed for two days trying to avoid casting votes for or against the foaming beverage. What, they pleaded, does beer have to do with home loan banks? While the Senate was pondering over this conundrum the valiant senator from Idaho came forth and saved the day for his dry friends on the Democratic side of the aisle. Instead of beer or red liquor, he cried, let us have inflation. What the country needs is another billion dollars of paper money. Grateful Democratic senators who are still balancing on the prohibition fence breathed a sigh of relief, and immediately took up cudgels for the inflation bill which Senator Glass introduced against his own judgment, and which Mr. Borah adopts.

Now the Senate is lost in the inflation jungle and seems to be quite incapable of finding its way back to the home loan bank bill. Democratic orators who were unable to see the relationship between relief to home owners and beer are readily capable of cementing a bond between home relief and inflation of the currency. In fact, some of the dry-voting, wet-pledged senators were anxious to swallow any kind of substitute rather than swallow Senator Bingham's beer.

While the Senate indulges in this political fencing, the public is waiting patiently for enactment of the remaining appropriation bills, for a sane measure of relief to home owners, and a measure to relieve unemployment. But the Senate loves to fiddle, wisecrack and play politics. Perhaps it is too much to expect senators to hold their noses to the grindstone while the political pots are beginning to boil back home. They must have one final burst of fireworks.

REGULATION OF PRICES.

With the swing of the pendulum to the extreme low price level of today, everything is too cheap. The present generation is having its first experience with the necessity of realizing a profit throughout the entire field of productive enterprise if the nation is to enjoy general prosperity. When there is no profit the citizen has little to spend and the government little to tax. It is because of this plain fact that the present rise in commodity prices, small as it is so far in most lines, is hailed with the enthusiastic hope that the upturn from the depression has begun. It is one of the various indications of improvement that bring renewed confidence. That prices should rise during this dull summer season encourages optimistic feelings with regard to fall trade.

The ruinous level of prices has led to renewed discussion of the advisability of modifying the anti-trust laws to enable price agreements to be made as a check upon destructive price competition and to assure a profit margin. The possibilities of even greater abuses if restrictions are removed are at once apparent, but many industrial leaders are advocating a moderate middle ground between repeal and the present iron-clad prohibitions.

Supreme Court decisions make it clear that under the law business interests may not agree upon a common selling price, but unlimited price variation under the competitive system brought several industries to desperate straits even before the evil effects of the depression were felt. Business has grown to such an extent in forty years and conditions have so changed that modification of the anti-trust laws can be undertaken, it is believed, without danger of creating monopolies.

A SUCCESSOR FOR RASKOB.

An interesting question that has not yet been answered is how the Democratic party intends to finance the campaign of Gov. Roosevelt and Speaker Garner. John J. Raskob, chief angel of the party, has been relieved of his functions as chairman of the national committee, and Democracy has a new strategist, James A. Farley. Before the Smith-Raskob faction was dethroned at Chicago, Mr. Raskob had given notice that no further benefactions could be expected from him. Even though Al Smith and his friends support the ticket, it is not to be supposed that they will finance it. Where, then, will the Democratic party obtain funds to pay its debt of 1928 and conduct the 1932 campaign?

When the last report was made the party was $559,000 in debt. In an ordinary year this deficit might not be a serious handicap, but in these times of depression Democrats groan every time they think of paying for the dead horse of 1928 with 1932 dollars. Yet the party can not afford to leave Mr. Raskob forever in the role of the forgotten man. He is largely responsible for the fireworks that have been carried on since 1928. Loans from Mr. Raskob have paved the way for the Roosevelt-Garner campaign. It now becomes the responsibility of the present organization to repay Mr. Raskob and to raise additional funds for the campaign.

Prospects for raising a substantial sum for these purposes are not bright. Big business is in straightened circumstances. Furthermore, it is not inclined to support a team that leans so far toward radicalism as do the Democratic candidates. Speaker Garner has especially alarmed business with his demand for a pork-barrel and for opening the Treasury to every one in need of money. Campaign money never flows freely into the coffers of one who is so prodigal with Uncle Sam's purse. Apparently the Democrats will have to find a new angel who loves experimentation and pork barrels, or make a desperate appeal to the "forgotten man" class.

Only one feature in the Democratic platform encourages liberal campaign contributions—the wet plank. It makes a powerful appeal to the beer interests to open their purses for the glory of Democracy. But even the liquor dealers are inclined to reexamine their contributions when they observe the horror with which Democratic senators face the beer issue in Congress.

Failure of the Democrats' "Victory Fund" drive has been very embarrassing. In spite of their apparent optimism, members of that party have been niggardly in relieving Mr. Raskob. The efforts of the new organization to finance itself and liquidate the old debt will furnish an important basis for estimating the strength of the Roosevelt-Garner ticket.

SPREADING EMPLOYMENT.

The unemployment problem is one that will have to be studied from many angles and for the future. It can not be settled merely by a return to greater industrial activity. Even before the collapse of business, and notwithstanding the prosperous times, unemployment had been steadily increasing for six years. Before the effects of the depression were felt it is estimated that there were 3,000,000 men out of work. It was not lack of business, but the machine which was responsible.

During the last century inventions, improved methods and machines of greater capacity came along at intervals to make great production possible with less human labor. Opposition to these improvements was silenced by the argument that in the long run displaced labor would be reabsorbed by increased trade and diversified new industries. This reasoning held good, as a rule, in the earlier days of machine development, but during more recent years revolutionary, labor-saving methods have come so thick and fast that workmen crowded out by marvels of machine efficiency have not all been able to readjust themselves, either at their regular trades or in new industries.

It is not uncommon for a modern factory to install machinery which displaces anywhere from 50 to 90 per cent of the human toilers. Some of them may find work making the machines that crowded them out, and all possibly may benefit from the cheaper product of the new process, but there remains an important majority that must suffer from the dislocation. How long does it take these workers to find new jobs? Various surveys quoted by Arthur Pound in the Atlantic, show that while probably one-fourth of those displaced obtain other work immediately, it requires nearly six months on the average to locate a new position, with the greatest hardship, naturally, falling upon the proportion who are left without work for nine months or a year.

Increased output with fewer workmen is not the exception, but is found to be the rule in virtually every industry. Improvements in oil refining have enabled production to be increased 84 per cent while the labor force has been reduced 5 per cent. Tobacco machines turn out 53 per cent more smokes with 13 per cent fewer operatives. Meat products, 20 per cent greater, are marketed with 19 per cent fewer workmen. Steel output is 8 per cent larger with an operating force reduced 9 per cent. Railroad transportation has reduced employes by only 1 per cent, but operation has grown 30 per cent. Cotton machinery has enabled a 3 per cent increase to be handled with 13 per cent fewer laborers. In the coal industry a reduction of 15 per cent in the number of miners has not prevented a 4 per cent increase in production.

With returning industrial activity it is inevitable that the more efficient plants or units will be put into operation first. Many factories that were in full blast three years ago are now obsolete and probably will never be operated again. It is now realized that the machine has increased production in the last ten years faster than consumption needs could possibly grow. Cheap mass production will never be discarded for a return to hand labor. Since all the present unemployed can not possibly be utilized at full time in modern plants without again causing a flood of overproduction, it is plain that the shorter week, or the shorter day, or both, offer a partial solution of the problem. If all are to be employed without ruining market prices with too great an output there must be a shortening of working hours that will enable a spread of work to include all.

DE VALERA IN RETREAT.

Ireland must now be fully aware that its president, Eamon de Valera, has led that unfortunate country into a quagmire from which there is no escape, except retreat. With his characteristic tenacity, Mr. de Valera withheld the semi-annual installment of the land annuities due to Great Britain under the Anglo-Irish treaty. But Parliament has promptly levied a retaliatory tariff against products of the Free State. By an overwhelming vote the House of Commons authorized the cabinet to impose duties up to 100 per cent for the purpose of collecting the land annuities and other obligations on which the Free State government has defaulted.

It is not difficult to imagine the consternation that this action has produced in Ireland. Great Britain is the Free State's best customer. Last year Irish farmers and live stock men sold about $55,000,000 worth of produce and meat to the British market. Farmers agree that a British tariff would bring them to ruin. Business men are also alarmed. The associated chambers of commerce at Dublin has passed a resolution deploring Mr. de Valera's row with Britain, and the stock exchange in the Irish capital is shaky.

President de Valera speaks about a tariff against British goods in retaliation, but he must be aware of the fact that a tariff war would injure the Free State far more than it would England. The British would transfer their orders for foodstuffs to Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and India, but the Free State would be isolated by tariff barriers.

The possibility of economic chaos in the Free State is so grave that even Mr. de Valera is displaying signs of weakness. It is revealed that the Free State government is impounding the annuities due to Great Britain in a special fund to be held pending the outcome of arbitration. Believing that they have an indisputable right to the annuities from both the moral and legal viewpoint, the British are willing to arbitrate the dispute, providing that the arbiters are chosen from the British Commonwealth of Nations. Mr. de Valera insists that would mean a "stacking of cards against the Free State," and demands arbitration outside of the empire. Meanwhile Britain is proceeding with her plans for tariffs against the Free State.

Refusal of the Free State Senate to abolish the oath of allegiance to King George has relegated that question to the background for the present. But the resistance of the London government suggests that Ireland can not follow the De Valera program without tearing the Free State apart from the British Commonwealth and consigning it to a fresh struggle with adversity.

Great Britain generously aids the cause of disarmament by telling other nations how to reduce the strength of their navies.

The first senator who offers a resolution to adjourn sine die will win universal fame.

RADICALISM LOSES

From the Boston Transcript.

President Hoover's controversy with Speaker Garner over the relief bill will prove useful in more ways than one. First, the bill, if it passes the Senate, will be vetoed, the veto will be sustained, and Congress will then have an opportunity to start de novo and turn out a measure that will be more in accord with sound economic principles. This in itself will prove an invaluable gain, for thinking men and women have been under grave apprehension while this measure has been in process, and the prospective victory of the President is destined to save hundreds of millions of dollars which would be wasted, to say nothing of avoiding the embodiment in law of a dangerous economic experiment.

The episode serves an equally useful and needed purpose in supplying at last a discernible line of differentiation between the two major parties. Not a Democrat in the House voted against the Garner bill and the group of Republicans who joined them were of the radical type who also regard the Federal Government as a fair subject for milking for money it does not possess. It long has been predicted that sooner or later the country must divide into two parties, conservative and radical, one standing by the principles upon which the country has been governed since its beginning, the other socialistically inclined.

Apparently this time has come. Roosevelt and Garner typify as perhaps could no others of their party the effort to get something for nothing, to steer the Ship of State into uncharted waters and to place upon Government responsibilities it is unfitted to fulfill. Indeed, conservative Republicans and Democrats alike prayed that the Democratic convention at least would nominate candidates whose sense of responsibility for the public welfare, whose grounding in the fundamentals of economic truth was so firm that even should a change in party government take place, the country still could rely upon common sense in the White House and in Congress to safeguard it against fatal errors of policy. The convention chose to do exactly the opposite.

It is, in a sense, accidental that the Hoover-Garner controversy visualizes the real issue and lifts it to the position of the greatest in the campaign. It is almost trite to say that it is one between a President who seeks only the general welfare and a group of politicians who are trying to catch votes in their States and districts. This is measurably true. But the roots of the divergence lie deeper than that. They involve the difference between careful conservatism and rampant radicalism; and, we believe, the country is ready to face the test.

Gov. Roosevelt would like to make 8 per cent water power a 100 per cent campaign issue.

Germany chuckles over gentlemanly agreements to transfer forgiven reparations to Uncle Sam, knowing full well that her contingent 1 per cent settlement can never again be increased.

If Idaho had been duly considerate of Senator Borah's silver views she would have covered up that big gold strike and said nothing about it.

Aimee and Ma just don't seem to have good luck with seconds.

Cal Coolidge will not go to the Olympic games. It seems there are to be no fish story contests.

It rankles Speaker Garner to see the market putting over its big pork bill without any danger of a veto.

Campaign Manager Farley says the Democrats will make "an extremely economical campaign." Doubtless in memory of the late Angel Raskob.

Isn't it typical generosity that Europe is willing to match repudiated hypothetical debts 100 per cent against cash actually advanced?

Relief Bill calling at the White House today will be greeted at the front door by Reddy Veto with the information that he can go right back to the Hill and get that hair cut.

Europe didn't believe 'steen American warnings that reparations and war debts were not Siamese twins, but if the former Allies are sincere, real action at Geneva must now supplement the Lausanne gesture.

The Governor of New York is wondering how he can exorcise the jinx—even Tom Heflin threatens to support him.

Government employes in the District of Columbia can not vote, they are not allowed to talk politics, next they will be compelled to eat spinach.

Gov. Roosevelt starts today on a little secret yachting trip, accompanied by a fleet of politicians and newspaper correspondents. Such is modern political privacy.

Americans were so poor last year that they spent only $4,000,000,000, or the cost of Federal Government, for amusements.

READING THE FUTURE.

Some there are who look and say
All is dark along the way.
Greater troubles still to be
Are the only things they see.
All they find is doubt and dread
In the mists that lie ahead.

Prophets of the gloomy clan
See the certain doom of man;
What the future holds in store
Seems not worth the waiting for.
And the sad, discouraged seers
Find no hope in coming years.

Neither sage nor seer am I,
Born with gift to prophesy,
But of one thing I am sure,
Love and laughter will endure.
June, whatever else betides,
Will be radiant with brides.

Little babies in July,
Tortured by the heat, will cry;
And when August comes again
Fields will gleam with golden grain;
Harvest time and winter's snow
To the last will come and go.

If He Is Master of the Ship, Let Him Take the Helm in a Storm.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

It is commonly said that governments were established for the protection of the weak—that the many banded together to obtain mutual protection against the predatory few.

It is more probable that the beginning of organized society was made by the strong. The first government head doubtless was a man of superior fighting ability who attracted admiring followers and held their allegiance by dividing the spoils of battle.

But very early in the life of the race the power of brawn was supplanted by the power of wealth. The man who had acquired property bribed other men to defend it. His organization was a government and the purpose of the government was to protect the advantages of the strong.

That purpose has not changed with the centuries.

Since the dawn of history the chief concern of government has been the protection of the property and the privileges of the powerful.

Now, as always, rules and standards and changes are made by the strong—never by the weak.

But now a new power has come into the world—a power greater than wealth itself. It is the power of a majority.

The purpose of government remains unchanged. Its business still is the protection of the strong. But now the strong are the people.

America has learned much in the last four years. It has lost faith in the old leaders and the old rules.

We are in the midst of revolution. Our sufferings are the birth pangs of a new order. Those who were strong are weak and fearful.

What does it all mean? It means a new birth of freedom, if the people are worthy of the power placed in their hands by disaster.

It can mean freedom from hypocritical politicians; freedom from rules that favor the rich; freedom from the tyranny of racketeers and the tyranny of fanatical minorities; freedom from organized groups that raid the Treasury; freedom from oppressive taxation; freedom from the waste, graft and favoritism that have so nearly wrecked our civilization.

Government will serve the strong, and the strong are the people.

The way is open to a new and better civilization if the people have courage to follow where opportunity leads.

Women in Politics.

Detroit Free Press.

It is pointed out by a political reporter that only four of the eight women who sat in the House of Representatives in the spring of 1931 are eligible for reelection this year. The others have withdrawn from the race or have been eliminated. A formidable array of male opponents awaits Senator Hattie Caraway, the only woman in the Senate, when she comes up for reelection.

There is a big difference between wielding political power and seeking and obtaining office. Women are adept politicians. They have wielded more power in this and other countries than many people suppose. But when it comes to running for office, American women seem to lack the inclination men have, now that the novelty has worn off the consciousness of eligibility. However, if the women of the country vote intelligently they do not have to hold offices to dictate how those offices shall be conducted.

Dryness in the South.

Philadelphia Public Ledger.

The South Carolina delegation at Chicago voted solidly for repeal and the Florida delegation was for it thirteen to one. Kentucky and Texas were unanimous for repeal, Louisiana voted for it, seventeen to three, and Tennessee eighteen to six. Experienced observers report, however, that in general antiprohibition sentiment in these Southern States has not kept pace with the action taken at the Democratic convention, and it is expected that in many cases candidates for Congress will refuse to indorse the party declaration. Unquestionably, wet sentiment has greatly increased in the South. But the drys are sufficiently strong in that section to cause some anxiety both to national and State Democratic leaders.

Al Gulps It Down.

New York Herald Tribune.

Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith announces he will "support the Democratic party." No one aware of the character of the regularity born and bred in him believed he would bolt. True, the nomination of Gov. Roosevelt for President, particularly through the maneuvers of his old-time foes—Mr. McAdoo and Mr. Hearst—was a bitter pill. But the once "Happy Warrior" swallowed it with a gulp.

Boston Herald.

With folks acting so erratically on their old allegiances, the statesmen don't dread the big stick in politics now half as much as the big switch.

No Time for Hasty Legislation.

New York Herald Tribune.

From two points of view we think the effort in Congress to hurry through legislation legalizing 4 per cent beer is ill-advised and unsound.

In the first place, the country is on its knees praying for the end of the session. Because of its appalling blunders in respect to tax bills, pensions, the economy and relief legislation and almost everything else since it went maverick in midwinter, the present Congress has lost every vestige of public confidence. Every day that it sits adds another worry to the Nation's list of troubles. The passage of any sort of beer law would require days and weeks. The price in public grief would be out of all proportion to the gain.

In the second place, we think there are other losses likely to result from such hastily conceived legislation which would outweigh the gain. The economic benefit in taxes would concededly be important—though such taxes are not to be compared with what will be available when prohibition has been ended.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Comment on Senator Glass' Plan for Commission to Sample Strong Liquor.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Senator Bulkley at the Democratic convention in Chicago aroused the applause of fellow Democrats with a dig at President Hoover, in which he stated that this was the "only country in the world with a commission form of government."

Now comes Senator Glass, eminent Democrat of Virginia, seriously proposing that another commission be formed to cogitate over the question of just what percentage of alcohol a drink may contain before it becomes intoxicating.

The answer, from a practical standpoint, should be based on actual experience by public usage, for a period of at least one year.

Furthermore, it is the duty of the Supreme Court, and not commissions, to interpret the Constitution; but how shall the honorable court reach an equitable decision without some experience and evidence based on public usage?

Congressmen and senators who are side-stepping mild beer legislation by engaging at this critical time in partisan jibes and horse-play are either up a tree, or are not playing fair.

Roosevelt tactfully avoids committing himself on the question by stating that he intends to leave his prohibition question in the hands of Congress. Are we to consider this a sample of the Roosevelt leadership?

President Hoover Still Has the Confidence of the Millions Who Voted for Him in 1928.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To the millions who voted for President Hoover in 1928, with very few exceptions, he still stands as a beacon in the stress of these years of depression just as he did during his past experiences when his great heart and mind were tremendously active for the welfare of mankind. Those critics who assail him little realize what this man has done. It is so easy to blame, when these commentators would prove weaklings were they at the helm.

The President has the confidence of those who think, of those who carefully weigh his acts, of those who know how much he has accomplished under terrific handicaps. That confidence which his followers had in 1928 I feel still exists and will persist in his election for a second term.

Praises the Cartoon, "Booze or Bread"—Says Hoover Is Working to Get Bread.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Let me give you my sincere thanks for your cartoon of July 5, "Booze or Bread." That is precisely where the choice will lie for millions of men and for their wives and children. What we should do now is to line up solidly behind President Hoover, who is working to give the country bread.

The Republican platform is disappointing on the prohibition matter; but until the law can be changed constitutionally there will be nothing doing for some years to come. But without regard to the wet and dry agitation, we must have bread, and President Hoover is getting it for us.

People Determined to Have Both Beer and Bread—Breweries Finance Democratic Ticket.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Make no mistake. The country is determined to have beer. It is the one great issue. You say the issue is between beer and bread, but I believe that the people are determined to have both beer and bread. The Democratic ticket will be better financed than the Republican, because breweries can afford to spend a good deal to get a chance to resume business.

Rev. Mr. Pierpoint Expresses Appreciation of Editorials in The Post.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For some time past I have been intending to drop you a line of appreciation for the fine editorials which have appeared so frequently in The Post. It is a matter of very great satisfaction to read the virile articles which you have published upon the various bills before the Congress of our country. Your hearty and sound denunciation of weakness, duplicity, and campaign-making propaganda ought to have a salutary effect.

Striking Scenic Effect at Washington Monument on July 4.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A natural phenomenon of striking and unusual impressiveness met the vision of those in the vicinity of the Washington Monument on the late evening of July 4. The day had been somber, the clouds were heavy. Suddenly about 7:20, from the west the sun came through with unusual power and brilliancy. The white shaft took the color of the purest opulent gold. From the apex to the base of the Monument on the west side a rainbow gradually formed and encircled this golden shaft, losing itself in the wealth of American flags that clustered at its base.

It was a significant time that was being celebrated; the Bicentennial year of George Washington's birth, and a day of that year that meant independence for the American colonies. One hundred and fifty thousand people were gathered at the base of the Monument waiting and watching for the fireworks to begin. The golden columns above their heads with the encircling rainbow seemed almost like a symbol of beneficence. At least it was a striking phenomenon of nature occurring at a significant time and place. MUSEUM PLANNED FOR FALLS CHURCH

George Washington Relics to Be Collected in Vestry and Choir Room.

Establishment of a George Washington Museum in the vestry and choir rooms in the old Protestant Episcopal Church in Falls Church, Va., was suggested in a sermon yesterday by the Rev. Clarence Stuart McClellan, newly appointed rector of the church.

"In the proposed museum I desire to gather pictures of Washington, places identified with him, colonial flags and pictures taken out of the religious, social, political and economic life of the time, when the Falls Church was first built, in 1734, and when this present church was erected in 1768," Mr. McClellan said.

The suggestion to establish the museum was made during a discussion of the rector's plans for the year. He also intends to place a large granite bowlder, bearing a bronze tablet, in front of the church. The tablet will tell the history of Falls Church and Washington's connection with it. This memorial, which will stand beside the flagpole in the church yard, will probably be unveiled on Thanksgiving Day, when Dr. Stephen S. Wise, famous Jewish leader, will be the invited speaker.

Data about the church and village and old pictures of it are being collected by Mr. McClelland and the vestry and will be published later in book form. Meantime, historical leaflets about the church will be printed and distributed as advertising. J. Fred Huber is chairman of the publicity committee.

Cuban Fishermen, Adrift 9 Days, Sail for Home

Charleston, S. C., July 10 (A.P.).—Five Cubans picked up last Tuesday by coast guardsmen after drifting nine days in their fishing smack Adelante sailed today for Baracoa, Cuba, in their 52-foot vessel. The quintet had been without food four days when picked up near Charleston after having been blown off the Cuban fishing grounds by a storm.

The Adelante, equipped only with sails, carried provisions for a 30-day voyage, but Capt. Pedro V. C. Cisneroo said he expected to reach Baracoa in fifteen days.

Crime in Chicago Sags 50 Per Cent This Year

Chicago, July 10 (A.P.).—The theory that unemployment begets crime, was given somewhat of a jolt in statistics released today by Chief of Detectives Walter Storms. Despite widespread privation, crime has decreased more than 50 per cent in Chicago during the past six months.

One result of this decrease, Storms said, is a projected lowering of theft insurance rates on automobiles.

Aid Distribution Registers Decline

964 Agencies in 125 Cities Gave Out $23,649,269 During April.

After a continuous rise since September, the amount of relief distributed in April registered a seasonal decline of 16 per cent from the record-breaking March peak, according to reports from 964 agencies in 125 cities made public by the Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor yesterday.

The total distributed by these agencies for the relief of families in their homes in April was $23,649,269 as contrasted with $28,204,908 in March. The April total, however, represented a great increase over April, 1931, when the amount of relief distributed totaled $14,051,002. Incomplete returns on the number of families aided indicate a decline of 4 per cent from March to April in the number of families given outright relief.

Grants for direct relief dropped 11 per cent between the two months. According to reports from 771 agencies, 776,598 families were aided in April as compared with 810,199 families in March. In April, 1931, the number was 408,230. Drastic cuts in April relief were reported by many cities. In New York relief dropped from $8,308,377 in March to $6,502,132 in April.

stricted to public loans of a self-liquidating nature.

Adjournment plans hang almost entirely upon the relief legislation, as they have for several weeks.

The Senate still is working on the administration-sponsored home loan discount bill, but leaders hope to get it out of the way within a day or two.

This bill has brought with it into the Senate the issues of beer and currency inflation, which also must be disposed of.

Vote on Borah Plan Today.

A vote is expected today on the Borah amendment to stick the Glass billion dollar currency expansion bill onto the home loan measure as a rider. Leaders predicted yesterday it would be adopted.

The Bingham beer amendment will come next. A motion will be made to refer it to a committee, and leaders were confident this would prevail.

The only other preadjournment hazard is the dispute between the two houses over the Army appropriation bill, involving the dismissal of 2,000 officers.

An agreement on this controversy was expected by leaders within a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Behrend are at home from New York, where they passed a week.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Schwartz have opened their cottage in Ventnor, N. J., for the summer.

A dinner was given Saturday night by the Women's Rotary Club at the Rossdhu Castle Club. Tall silver candelabra were used as a decoration with roses. The supper dance following was largely attended by young people, among them a group of Virginia Military Institute alumni.

Plans are under way at Rossdhu Castle for a French fete Thursday with the old dances, the Pavanne gavotte and the minuet, in costume, and French patriotic songs of the period of the fall of the Bastille and the "Marseillaise" will be sung. The flag of France will float from the battlements and all the attendants will wear the tricolor.

Miss Elizabeth Anna Kaufman is the guest of friends in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Dorsey Downey, of Olney Inn, have issued invitations to a reception tonight from 8 until 10 at the Inn in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Stabler Gilpin, whose marriage was announced recently.

Among those attending the firemen's convention in Frostburg the past week from the Sandy Spring Volunteer Company were: Herbert Adams, Morris and Spencer Brown, Earl Nicholson, Edward Barnsley, Herbert Dailey, Roy and Herbert Davis, and Herbert Harding.

Hundreds Inspect Post Model Home

Are Favorably Impressed by Residence in Thornhill Road.

A bright Sunday was made brighter for hundreds yesterday by a visit to The Washington Post model home. The new model home at 9138 Thornhill road in North Hills of Sligo Park is a wonder in residential construction. Throngs of visitors have inspected this fine home, showing qualities of construction and every possibility for economic maintenance.

They have been most favorably impressed by the handsome dwelling built by the North Washington Realty Co., developers of North Hills of Sligo Park, furnished and decorated by the Hecht Co., and being presented by J. Wesley Buchanan, Inc., agents for the highly restricted community.

The home is a pronounced achievement in value-giving. It sets new standards of architectural and structural excellence in the moderate-priced field and the surprise of the year awaits those who visit it. The home is open daily and Sunday until 9 o'clock in the evening. To reach this delightful model dwelling, drive out Sixteenth street or Georgia avenue to Silver Spring, turn right at the traffic light on Colesville pike about a half-mile to the entrance of North Hills.

Radio Dial Flashes

By ROBERT D. HEINL

DESPITE assertions to the contrary, Dr. W. W. Perrett, missionary for 40 years in Labrador, claims the natives distinctively hear the "swishing" of the Aurora Borealis.

"I have asked several natives about it and they all say it can be heard," Dr. Perrett writes to his explorer friend, Commander E. F. MacDonald, jr., radio manufacturer, of Chicago. "It makes them smile when I tell them some scientists say 'the sound is caused by the falling of minute ice-crystals due to the freezing of the moisture in the observer's breath.'"

Dr. Perrett gave Commander MacDonald the benefit of his observations of the influence of the aurora on radio reception.

"One hears remarks as follows: 'How's the radio tonight?' 'No good, too much aurora.'" Dr. Perrett said. The aurora often makes the radio crackly, something like sparks crackling, though I should not like to say this happens only on nights when the aurora is brilliant. Then, when listening in, the music or whatever the item on the program may be, has almost faded out, and, on looking out of the window I have observed a wave of aurora passing overhead at the time. There is fading at other times, but it is very marked some nights when the aurora is very bright. I think the fading is more marked when the aurora is low than when it is higher in the sky.

"ANOTHER thing strikes me as perhaps being worthy of observation, namely, whether the direction of the aurora makes any difference, i. e. with the aurora playing from north to south or from east to west. It may make a difference, though I have never taken notice of this.

"There is something I believe all radio fans notice here, and I have never seen it mentioned in a paper, that as the moon approaches new and full, with spring tides, reception improves, whereas reception is poorest when the moon is at the quarters with neap tides. It remains for scientists to declare whether it is the influence of the moon or the tides, but with us the fact of there being this noticeable difference is pretty strongly established."

WITH the return of Ruth Tuckey Shear and her accompanist, Nell Paxton, to the Community Chest program on WOL at 8:50 tonight, the anonymity which has shrouded the identity of the Community Chest girl is torn aside. Since January 1, Mrs. Ruth Tuckey Shear and her accomplished accompanist have put on these programs once each week with but two absences, their time being contributed to the Community Chest, as is that of the station.

During this six months the Community Chest girl has introduced a number of leading Washington artists on this program, and her guest star for tomorrow night will be Esther Spier, concert pianist, whose playing is already familiar to the radio audience of Washington.

George Bernard Shaw, journalist, critic and playwright, will tell the story of his rise to world prominence in journalism and literature during the international broadcast from London (WMAL, 3:20 o'clock this afternoon).

"Skippy" will begin a six-a-week program series over WMAL at 5:30 this afternoon, having changed networks following the conclusion of the series on WRC.

ALTHOUGH they were not apprised of the fact, listeners to the Democratic convention heard the tryout of George M. Cohan's new song, "We Need a Man." It will be used in a forthcoming sound picture, "Phantom President."

Richard Crooks will delve into the classics for a portion of the Voice of Firestone program (WRC, 7:30 tonight) singing "Mon Appari" from "Martha." Other numbers will be "Kashmiri Song," "When You're Away," "Ay, Ay, Ay" and "Estrellita."

NATS POUND OUT 19 HITS TO DEFEAT CHISOX, 13-3

This Morning with Shirley L. Povich

COL. JAKE RUPPERT'S threat to carry his appeal of the Dickey fine and suspension into the councils of the American League meeting at Cleveland today finds Clark Griffith, owner of the Nats, unruffled and confident that the ruling of League President Herridge will be sustained by the board of directors.

Sometime before the meeting is called to order Mr. Griffith will confer with the owner of the Yankees, and yesterday expressed confidence that Ruppert will be willing to abide by the ruling that fined Dickey $1,000 and suspended the catcher for 30 days for his assault on Carl Reynolds here last Fourth of July.

"It wasn't a fight," Griffith declared. "It was an assault. A plain case of premeditated attack and the most dastardly thing I have ever seen in baseball. Ruppert apparently hasn't got all the facts. He's willing to go to the front for his ball players, apparently, but when he hears the Washington version of the case I think he'll feel differently."

Dickey's attack on Reynolds that fractured his jaw in two places was not a blow struck in the heat of anger. It was plainly deliberate and premeditated as this department saw it.

Dickey didn't rise and sock Reynolds immediately after being sprawled on the ground in the collision at the plate. He retained his rationalism long enough to retrieve the ball and throw to third base to head off Kingdon. It was after he had made this play that he sloughed Reynolds when the latter didn't know he was going to be hit. If that isn't premeditation, over the center-field fence is out.

Griffith thinks the Yankees and Dickey should consider themselves lucky at the extent of the fine. And he has grounds. Dickey will be back in action at least a month before Reynolds, the innocent victim of the attack, will be ready to rejoin the Nats' line-up.

It is a case of the defender getting a better break than the innocent victim. The Yankees will have the services of their star catcher a month before the Nats gain advantage of Reynolds' presence, and it was the Yankees, not the Nats, who were to blame.

Griffith is prepared to deliver a scathing indictment of Dickey for his act. The Nats' owner will be heard at the meeting today and he has enough arguments to make the board of directors of Soviet Russia vote the late czar a posthumous medal of valor.

In the meantime, Reynolds, the innocent victim, is taking what solace he can from his liquid diet at two-hour intervals, and hoping that his six-week vacation with his jaws wired will leave him in condition to train down to shape in two additional weeks.

Reynolds watched the game from the stands yesterday and commented for the first time on the assault.

"Dickey's punch stunned me," said Carl. "I didn't know what hit me. I thought it was a ball, or a bat. I didn't think of fighting back. Everything was blank. My jaw didn't hurt, but I couldn't see anything. I didn't realize that it was Dickey that had hit me until I saw the umpires talking to him.

"Then, when I gathered what had happened, they wouldn't let me fight."

Muehleisen's Play Beats Mitchell

Coast Star Annexes District Net Title, 6-4, 6-2, 6-2.

Markey-Considine in Doubles Final by 2-Set Victory.

AS was more or less anticipated since the day his entry came into the hands of the tennis committee, Dolf Muehleisen, 25-year-old Army Air Corps cadet, from California, yesterday won the forty-fifth annual District of Columbia singles championship, vanquishing Dooly Mitchell, Washington champion, in three straight sets, 6—4, 6—2, 6—2.

Played at Wardman Park Hotel, the match drew nearly 1,000 spectators. Winfree Johnson, president of the Washington Tennis Association, presented the winner with the Dumbarton Bowl, which must be won three times for permanent possession.

Muehleisen won about as he pleased, producing his best tennis of the tournament to check Mitchell upon the threshold of the District title, which has evaded his finest play for seven years. There was not the least bit of indecisiveness about Muehleisen yesterday, such as marked his game in the semifinals against Bob Considine; instead, he lashed out confidently, sending Mitchell an assortment of shots which eventually baffled the local man.

Muehleisen Changes Tactics.

A cunning change in tactics, effected near the end of the first set, put the eventual winner in the van. Playing Mitchell drive for drive, Muehleisen found himself faced with thumping drives harder than his own shots and more competition than he had expected. Mitchell held his point for point until 4—4 in the first set, and reached 40—30 on his own service, only to miss a whizzing backhand drive down the line by several inches.

Here Muehleisen began directing a series of slipping, sliding shots from his forehand side to Mitchell's. He had discovered that the local man is death on high balls, and Mitchell got few of these to hit thereafter, instead, being constantly on the run chasing the illusive undercut shots of the Californian.

But Muehleisen needed more than a defense to win, and his offense he unleashed in a fine service, a cold-blooded backhand drive and volleying that left little to be desired. With the score 4—4 in the first set he saved the ninth game and then won five straight, for a lead of 4—0 in the second.

Mitchell Fights Desperately.

Mitchell, fighting desperately, broke through his service to capture his first game of the set, but Muehleisen quickly went to 5—1 on net play, was checked momentarily, for 5—2 and finished off the set.

Mitchell held on until 2—2 in the second, but Muehleisen was out to win and it was soon over. He broke Mitchell's service at love in the final game and wound up with a backhand placement down the line off Dooly's last smartly hit delivery.

Earlier in the day the doubles team of Bud Markey and Bob Considine entered the finals by beating Lieuts. Gerry Smith and Bill McCue, 6—1, 6—4.

Muehleisen and Lieut. Stan Robinson will meet Maurice O'Neill and Barney Welsh today at 4 o'clock at Wardman Park Hotel in the other semifinal round doubles match.

Philly Bout May Balk Chocolate-Berg Match

Philadelphia, July 10 (A.P.).—If Jackie Kid Berg fights Kid Chocolate in New York July 18, according to the plan announced today by Madison Square Garden, he may violate a contract with Lew Tendler, who promotes bouts at the Phillies ball park.

The Whitechapel Windmill has signed articles to box Young Joe Firpo here July 18 in the semifinal to the Johnny Jadick-Tony Canzoneri title mill. Tendler said today the Garden had asked him to free Berg from his contract but that he had refused.

58 Hits Made as Athletics Beat Indians, 18-17, in 18th

Foxx Poles Trio of Homers; Nine Hits for Burnett.

JIMMY FOXX.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 10 (A.P.).—Cleveland and Philadelphia battled wildly and stubbornly today for eighteen innings—two full regulation games—before Jimmy Foxx crossed the plate with the run that gave the Athletics a hard-earned 18-to-17 victory. Doubles by Foxx and McNair scored the deciding run.

Fifty-eight base hits rattled off the offerings of five pitchers in today's baseball marathon, three of them home runs by Foxx and one a home run by Earl Averill.

Two new all-time major league records and one modern one were broken in the game. The 58-hit total topped by seven the previous existing mark of 51, established by the Phillies and Louisville in 1894, while Burnett's nine hits enabled him to set a new figure for most safeties in one game by an individual player. Wilbert Robinson, playing with Baltimore in 1892, had the previous high, seven. The Indians' 33 hits set new team figures, beating the 31 total credited the New York Giants against Cincinnati in 1901.

The game was won and lost a half dozen times according to normal standards of baseball. The most notable occasion was in the ninth inning when Ed Morgan, Cleveland first sacker, allowed Dykes' easy roller to go between his legs.

The error snatched victory from the tribe, which was leading 14 to 13, with two men out. As it was, Simmons walked and the irrepressible Foxx then singled to score both runners and keep the A's in the running.

Foxx hit homers No. 31, 32 and 33.

BARTUSH DUE BATTLE AT BOLLING

Meets Speers Tomorrow Night in Mat Cofeature.

BIG shots of grappledom will invade the open air arena at Bolling Field tomorrow night when matchmaker Goldie Ahearn and Lieut. C. W. Cousland offer another of their wrestling festivals. In keeping with his promise, Matchmaker Bert Bertolini has banded together an exceptional field of talent for this show.

Probably one of the most sensational matches seen hereabouts in some time will result from the clashing of Billy Bartush, who is doing a homecoming here, against Frank Speers, former gridiron celebrity.

Shikat Meets Tartar In McLeod.

Both Bartush and Speers are earnest, willing mixers who are not averse to resorting to gridiron tactics.

In the other wind-up shot, Dick Shikat returns against George McLeod, one of the leading championship contenders. McLeod figures to give the powerful German one of the finest runs yet accorded him locally.

Thirty-minute brevities will be headlined by the locking up of Jack Sherry, one of wrestling's finest, and Alex Aberg. Other matches list George Calza vs. Danny Winters; Glenn Munn vs. Mike Romano and the mysterious masked marvel against an opponent to be named later.

Tickets are available at Goldie Ahearn's, ladies accompanied by male escorts being admitted gratis.

Red Sox, Tigers Split; Seven Hits for Jolley

Boston, July 10 (A.P.).—The Tigers and Red Sox divided a double-header today, Detroit winning the first, 7 to 5, and Boston taking the second, 13 to 2.

The feature was a nine-run rally staged by the Sox in the fourth inning of the nightcap, at the expense of Izzy Goldstein.

Smead Jolley had a big day with the stick, making three hits out of five in the opener and four out of four in the second, including a home run and a double.

He made the circuit clout and a single in the big fourth. Watwood drove in four runs in the slugfest. A four-run rally in the eighth inning of the opener gave the Tigers the victory.

SCHWARTZ IS 8-5 CHOICE TONIGHT

Picked to Win From Landers in Twin-City Feature.

TWICE postponed, the return eight-round bout between those speedy bantamweights, Benny Schwartz, Baltimore, and Billy Landers, Norfolk, is scheduled again tonight in Twin City Arena near Laurel, where Promoter Charley Cornell offers a 32-round program opening at 8:30 o'clock.

Schwartz, though beaten by Landers on May 9 in Alexandria, probably will be favored to win at something like 8 to 5. Most of the fans who witnessed the earlier clash thought he was entitled to the decision. Landers received the verdict from Referee Charlie Short who was swayed by Billy's furious seventh-round rally that nearly resulted in a knockout.

Schwartz Seeking Revenge.

Older and more experienced, Schwartz is out to avenge himself in a big way. More lucrative matches are awaiting him if he gets by tonight's obstacle. He is sought by promoters in Baltimore and New York to meet such stars as Midget Wolgast, fly-weight champion, and Emil Pladner, European bantamweight champion. A bout in New York with Antol Kocsis, Hungarian title holder, whom he defeated last month, also is a possibility.

Landers is confident of making it two straight victories. He believes his powerful right-hand punching will more than offset Schwartz's truly fine left jab and hook. He plans to carry the fight to Benny, and, if necessary, take two-for-one in order to plant his haymaker on the Baltimorean's classic chin. Billy was only amused at recent reports from Schwartz and the latter's manager, Goldie Ahearn, that he is due for a trouncing.

Schwartz will weigh about 119 and Landers, 115.

Sluggers to Show in Preliminaries.

The preliminaries offer some old-fashioned slugging with Billy Essinger, crowd-pleasing local lightweight, cast in one of the principal roles. Billy fights Fred Kelly, of Philadelphia, in six rounds. Another six brings together Charley Thompson, Baltimore welterweight, and Jimmy Moran, Norfolk. Billy Hooe, Mohawk Club junior welterweight, helps raise the curtain with Wildcat Izzy, Baltimore.

Buses departing from the Annapolis Hotel on a five-minute schedule starting at 7 o'clock will transport fans to the arena at nominal cost. Escorted ladies will be admitted free.

BOXING BITS' SELECTIONS—Schwartz to beat Landers; Bruno to beat Antonelli; Essinger to beat Kelly; Thompson to beat Moran, and Hooe to beat Izzy. (Batting .733).

Garibaldi-Grobmeier In Thursday Feature

The wrestlers return to action at Griffith Stadium Thursday night with Joe Turner presenting Gino Garibaldi and Fred Grobmeier in the feature match. Turner has the same card intact that he had hoped to show last week before a storm hit the ball park and washed away his second program in two years. Backing the feature will be the following matches: Rudy Dusek vs. Lou Plummer, Chief White Feather vs. Marshall Blackstock, Vic Chirstie vs. Pat O'Shocker, and Frank Brunowicz vs. Jack Zarnos. The tickets for last week's show were held over for Thursday's card.

Pirates Down Dodgers on Error

Wilson's Miscue in Ninth Lets Bucs Win, 8 to 7.

Umpire Bans Gibson; Barbee Is Hurt in See-Saw Game.

BROOKLYN, July 10 (A.P.).—The league leading Pittsburgh Pirates paid a flying one-day visit to Ebbets Field today and took home an 8 to 7 victory after nine innings of see-saw baseball.

Floyd Vaughan, young Pirate shortstop, scored the winning run in the ninth when he singled and went all the way home on Comorosky's drive that went through Hack Wilson and rolled to the fence. Both starting pitchers, Mungo and French, were driven to cover in the third.

Manager George Gibson of the Pirates was banished by Umpire Magerkurth for arguing a called third strike on Swift, the winning pitcher. Barbee, Pittsburgh outfielder, injured his shoulder making a diving catch in the sixth and Comorosky finished the game in left field.

YANKS TWICE BEATEN BY BROWNS

Gomez Bows, 10-9, in Opener; 2d Ends in 10th, 8 to 7.

NEW YORK, July 10 (A.P.).—The St. Louis Browns captured two close ones from the leading Yanks today, 10 to 9 and 8 to 7, the nightcap going ten innings.

Goose Goslin led the visitors' attack in the first game, in which Lefty Gomez was shelled from the hill, with five hits that drove in four runs. Errors by Crossetti and Ruth, however, gave the Browns what proved the winning run.

Schulte and Burns were the batting stars of the second game, each getting four hits and driving in three runs. Burns also had three hits in the opener and hit a home run in each game.

WITH Bob Lyons pitching a one-hit game, the City Cab Co. Nine, fifth place team, provided the surprise of the Capital City League's unlimited battles yesterday by defeating the Ciro's Villagers, 6-0. It was the second league defeat of the season for the Villagers.

This happened in Section A along with a 10-3 victory for the Union Printers over the Congress Heights club. In Section B, Columbia Heights and Rock Creek Servicenter, the one-two clubs, won their games, defeating the Franc Jewellers, 4-2, and the Diamond Cab Co., 17-5, respectively.

St. Joseph's turned in a 4-3 victory over Federal Storage in a well-played game. Grazzini had an edge over Milburn in a pitchers' battle. Hall led the St. Joe attack with three hits, while Mitchell slammed a triple to score the winning run when Cinotti lined out Freschi.

Roudabush turned in a six hit game for the Union Printers and a steady performance that was deserving of victory. Holbrook and Rowe were the leaders in the Typos attack with three hits each. Five runs in the third inning clinched the game.

Ensor eased his way to victory over the Diamond Cabmen behind the slugging of the Rock Creek team. Sorell and Drissell slammed out three hits each while Brandon hit a homer for the losers. Columbia Heights with Rhodes besting Batson won a pitchers' battle. Prat, with two singles and a triple, starred at bat.

The Dixie Pigs and Horning Jewellers were in action against independent teams.

JOE AND ASBESTOS

(Watch Sunday's Post for New Secret Code) —By Ken Kling

Asbestos just missed a 4-to-1 shot Saturday when his horse ran second. He will probably win next start, as do all losing horses. Bank roll is $60.92. Joe's bank roll is $248. Today his system horses are Marlene, Journey's End, Aleeta, Refiner, Common, Monel.

AT THE POST

with Bill Bennings

DEAR AL: ARLINGTON PARK, CHICAGO, JULY 10.

Not much to brag about yesterday. Two winners here. Should be ashamed to count Equipoise after the way he and Workman performed. However, after scratches, I put Sandwrack over in the otner tracks group. This slump can't last long, pal. While it lasts, play them across the board. There's been a profit that way every day.

At the other courses tomorrow, I'm backing these: Song of Songs, Boardwalker, Clothesline, Kulaman, Black Diamond, Trice. BILL.

FIRST RACE — SERENABIT hasn't been to the races since Pimlico. This may be an indication that all is not well with this filly. However, she has stepped lively in several trials and I am giving her a chance to take this field into camp. Defeated maidens easily in her one victory in three starts. FLIRTING and POLYGENY for the remainder.

SECOND RACE—MEETING PLACE comes up to this race fortified by fast workouts, and I believe this one can turn the trick. SUBTLETY'S last was hardly true. Likely to beat out MOCKER for the place money.

THIRD RACE—ETCETRA'S last was a corker and I see him right out there winging again tomorrow. Martin will ride again. VISHNU has been unable to muster that terrific speed that characterized his work in Maryland. However, a big chunk of weight will be off tomorrow. This one so rigged is dangerous. HIGHER may be the third horse.

FOURTH RACE—MISS CORRINNE circled the Hertz course the other day in such a convincing manner that I can not pass up the opportunity to put her on top of these. Wright will be back in the saddle. BIG BRAND was impressive the last time. MAD PURSUIT may wake up but I don't know why.

FIFTH RACE—LIQUEUR gets such a neat pull in the weights that I can't put this youngster down. Has won four races this year, although his last was terrible. GLORITONE looks like the one to beat, with MAROONED and MIDSHIPMAN fighting it out for third.

SIXTH RACE—FIDDLER is another which gets a break in the weights. Gets rid of 17 pounds today and this fellow is mighty fast on occasions when not burdened. May upset these at a long price. OUTBOUND and GOLDEN PRINCE to wage war for the place end.

SEVENTH RACE—CHOSEN PAL is an old friend who I have been watching closely. Believe tomorrow's the day. This one has been brought along carefully and seems ready for one of those driving stretch runs that mark all his winning races. MARLENE and SHIVA for what's left.

58 HITS AS MACKS WIN IN 18TH, 18-17

batting in eight runs, scored the winning run and played hobb generally with the Indians. Johnny Burnett, Indian shortstop, was the tribe's sparkplug, ramming out nine hits, two for extra bases, in eleven times at bat.

Mule Haas, plus a new timidity on the part of the Indians on the base paths, were contributing factors to the tribe's defeat. Three times Haas blighted Indian rallies with spectacular fielding plays. Once, in the ninth with two on and two out, he made a running shoestring catch of Vosmik's liner to kill off the winning run.

Krause lasted only one inning for Philadelphia, Rommel going 17 innings to be credited with victory. Wes Ferrell lost his sixth game of the season, going eleven and one-third innings after relieving Hudlin.

Griffith Blue Coals Win in Rally, 10-9

Wee Willie Glascoe's Griffith Blue Coals staked one of the most thrilling rallies of the season to defeat the Mount Rainier nine yesterday by 10 to 9. The Blue Coals went into the ninth trailing by four runs and came through with the necessary five tallies. The feature blows of the rally were a homer by Dumford with two on and Dick Hughes' double, which put the finishing touches on the Mount Rainier defeat.

SPIRITUAL COURAGE CALLED WORLD NEED

Rev. R. Y. Nicholson Talks on Certainty in Religion and Business.

"Uncertainty is everywhere," declared the Rev. R. Y. Nicholson, preaching yesterday morning at the Rhode Island Avenue Methodist Protestant Church.

"It is the blight in the business world, the stagnation in the industrial world, the rust eating the heart out of individuals," the Rev. Mr. Nicholson continued.

"I Am Certain" was the topic of the sermon, the text being taken from the ninth verse of the fifty-sixth Psalm: "This, I know that God is for me."

"Up from this uncertain world there comes a voice, a desperate voice, calling for certainty. But from whence is this certainty to come? It is not coming from the statesmen of this, nor of any other nation. It is not coming from the leaders of industry, nor finance, neither in this nor in any other country. It must come from somewhere. It does come from somewhere, it comes from religion.

"These are troublesome times and for these times we need a certainty. We need a certainty in business, in industry, but above all, a certainty in the individual life. We need not alone an industrial and financial certainty but a spiritual certainty.

"The certainty of God needed for these days must come, not of outward evidences but an inward experience. This holding, steadying, conquering, certainty is born of a personal experience of God.

"Out of this spiritual certainty there comes that which men so sorely need today, namely, courage. The courageous man is the certain man. The courageous man is the man who is certain of his position, certain of himself and, above all, certain of God.

"It is this spiritual certainty that makes a firm step, a strong hand, a calm mind, a courageous heart and a victorious life."

Cooling Showers Are Likely Today

Kiosk, Downtown, Shows 98.5 High; Official Mark Is 93.

Those who sweltered in the 93 degree temperature of yesterday, will find relief in thundershowers promised for this afternoon and evening by the Weather Bureau.

Though the thermometer in the kiosk near The Post Building registered 98.5 degrees at 4:30 p. m., the official high registration at the Weather Bureau was 93 at 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

Official low for the day was 65 degrees at 5 a. m., while the kiosk thermometer gave 70 degrees at 6 a. m., as the lowest. Today will be partly cloudy, the Weather Bureau says, and it will be somewhat cooler this afternoon because of the expected thundershowers.

Tomorrow will be fair, with moderate west winds, shifting northwest and north.

CATHOLIC ADDRESS UPHOLDS MARRIAGE

"Is Divine Institution," Says Mrs. Agnes H. Stewart at University.

"Marriage is a divine institution, raised to the dignity of a sacrament by Christ, Himself," said Mrs. Agnes H. Stewart in discussing the Catholic attitude of marriage yesterday before the Catholic Evidence Guild.

"Among pagan nations at the beginning of the Christian era," she said, "there existed polygamy, polyandry, promiscuity, and in general, appalling vice. But our Lord came as the Regenerator of Society. Society is composed of families, and the better the families, the better will society be. For this reason, Jesus Christ in His Divine wisdom restored the perpetuity of the marriage bond.

"The Catholic church has taught from the very beginning that marriage can never be dissolved until the death of either of the parties to the contract. In the nineteenth chapter of St. Matthew's gospel we read: 'What therefore God hath joined together let no man put asunder.'

"The Catholic doctrine is sustained by St. Mark in the tenth chapter of his gospel: 'Whosoever shall put away his wife and marry another committeth adultery against her. And if the wife shall put away her husband and be married to another, she committeth adultery.'

Miss Grace Reardon spoke on the "Marks of the Church" at the same meeting, which was held on the campus of the Catholic University.

Hotal Manager Robbed of $17.

Two white men carrying revolvers held up and robbed William H. Scott, manager of the Harris Hotel, at 17 Massachusette avenue northwest, of $17 early yesterday. The men entered the lobby and forced Harris to give them the money and then ran.

LACK OF EXPERIENCE BLAMED FOR UNREST

Rev. William Pierpoint Says Too Much Theory Is Cause of Confusion.

"Religion has but little value unless it can be transmitted into actual experience," said the Rev. William Pierpoint, preaching yesterday at McKendree Methodist Episcopal Church.

"Systems of theology may be beautiful, but are cold and lifeless until they are realized in personal life," Mr. Pierpoint declared.

The speaker's topic was "The Challenge of the Christian Religion." He took his text from the eighth verse of the thirty-fourth chapter of the Book of Psalms, "O taste and see that the Lord is good. Blessed is the man that trusteth in Him."

Mr. Pierpoint said in part:

"Religious experience is a fact, not so much because all men have proven it so, but rather because all men may prove it so to their own satisfaction. The law of verification holds true in the spiritual realm as it does in the natural world. If we have not found it so, it is most likely because we have not met the conditions of proof. We do not expect to heat iron by thrusting it into ice water, neither do we expect to freeze ice by pouring water upon fire. The conditions for the production of either of the foregoing must be met, and when met the desired results are obtained.

Too Little Experience.

"The confusion and unrest existing in the realm of religion today is caused by too much theory and too little experience. We are contending for all sorts of postulations but are unwilling to submit ourselves to the conditions of proving them. It is the purpose of the Christian religion to make men God-conscious, and to translate that God-consciousness into God-realization. To affirm the existence of God is good, but it does not go far enough, it stops halfway and leaves the believer with the mere affirmation of a fact, which without the experience is lifeless. Its tendency is to leave the life of the believer cold, vague and unprofitable. To know the latter is to become conscious of the presence of God and to practice it in the warming of the heart and the entrance into that relationship with God that makes life wholesome and profitable.

"Any religious appeal that falls short of the challenge to the soul of man to experience God fails to meet the supreme need of the soul of man. God knew and we know that man may become conscious of the existence of the Creator by contact with the abundant evidences of His work. 'The heavens declare the glory of God.' Sun, moon and stars in their noiseless journey across the sky speak of His creative power. Stones may, as Christ said, 'cry out to acclaim Him,' while all nature may break forth in exclaiming that the hand that made us is Divine.

"The Psalmist knew God. He was fully acquainted with His mercy, His goodness, His providential care. He had been the recipient of His marvelous deliverances. He was supremely happy when conscious that his life comported with His laws and testimonies.

Not Call of Theorist.

"He slept like an infant upon the peaceful breast of its mother when his hands were clean. He was so familiar with God's goodness, he could say, 'O taste and see that the Lord is good; blessed is the man that trusteth in Him.' His call is not the call of a theorist, but that of one who has had an experience and who speaks with that surety which experience alone allows.

"Christ made no appeal to men to follow blindly either His life or His teachings. He declared, 'If any man will do His will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself.' Here is a challenge to prove for ourselves the validity of the religion of Christ, and then to be able to speak for it with that incontrovertible authority with which thousands of men and women who have done the will of God have spoken. Their transformed lives bear eloquent testimony to the power of the Gospel to redeem men from the power of sin. Their strangely warmed heart with its attendant consciousness of the indwelling presence of Christ satisfies their soul.

"That which they have seen and felt, with confidence they tell; and publish to the sons of men, the signs infallible."

CORNER STONE LAID AT GOSPEL MISSION

Dr. L. H. Reichelderfer and Gen. Glassford Praise Organization's Work.

The corner stone of the new Gospel Mission Building at 812 Fifth street northwest was laid at a ceremony yesterday at which Dr. Luther H. Reichelderfer, president of the Board of Commissioners, and Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, superintendent of police, praised the work of the mission.

Gen. Glassford, spoke of the invaluable aid given by the mission when the hunger marchers were in Washington, while Dr. Reichelderfer expressed the view that municipal welfare should eventually supplant private philanthropy.

A copy of The Washington Post of Sunday, July 10, containing an announcement of the ceremony, was included in the records placed in the corner stone. Other speakers at the ceremony included Dr. M. E. Miller, president of the board of trustees of the mission; William L. Clarke and Harvey V. Prentice, superintendent.

Mrs. William Buckingham, a member of the board of trustees, assisted in placing the corner stone.

A program of songs was given by the National Memorial Baptist Church Brass Quartet. The Rev. John C. Palmer, pastor of the Washington Heights Presbyterian Church, gave the invocation, and the Rev. R. Y. Nicholson, pastor of the Rhode Island Avenue M. P. Church, the benediction.

The new building was designed by Col. P. M. Anderson. It is being built at a cost of $125,000 and will furnish sleeping accommodations for 400 men. A chapel with capacity for a similar number and a cafeteria for 500 men is included.

Women to Interview Hoover on Peace Stand

Two Washington women, Miss Dorothy Shoemaker and Mrs. Olive E. Clapper, are members of a committee of the Women's International League who will interview President Hoover Wednesday on questions of international policy. Other presidential nominees also will be interviewed by the committee.

World peace must not be obscured by the prohibition question or other controversies, the league declared in a statement yesterday. The statement added that universal disarmament, revision of tariff schedules and adjustment of war debts were fundamental subjects to be settled.

Northeast Studies Playground Sites

Citizens Urge New Location to Replace Abandoned Plaza Plot.

A committee of residents of the Northeast section is studying a list of sites for playgrounds to replace the old Plaza Playground and will report their findings to the Park and Planning Commission of the District. The committee called on Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, executive officer of the commission, Saturday, urging that plans be made for the new playground.

According to the committee, there are now 6,000 children in the Northeast section who have no place to play since the Plaza lot has been absorbed by development work. Col. Grant and Capt. E. N. Chisholm, the commission's engineer, asked the committee to study the eligible sites and choose the most appropriate.

It is understood the committee was given no assurance that the land for the playground would be purchased this year. It was intimated, however, that if the price were sufficiently low the deal might be closed now.

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

If there had been a column on Saturday, this is largely what it would have said:

By a sudden eleventh-hour shift in bookings, next week's stage show at the Earle will be of extraordinary interest. Beginning Friday, George Brent and Loretta Young will appear in person on the Earle stage in a sketch which they will present during a brief tour of a limited number of Eastern cities, of which Washington, as I understand it, will be the first.

Mr. Brent, principally distinguished for having appeared opposite Ruth Chatterton in "The Rich Are Always With Us," and Miss Young, one of the most accomplished and most charming of the screen's younger actresses, are coming East from the Coast by plane and are due to arrive in New York on Wednesday. They will proceed at once to the Capital and take the place on the Earle's bill for which Bert Lytell in "The Valiant" was originally announced.

The sub rosa tip, of course, is that Mr. Brent wishes to be in the East to greet Miss Chatterton upon her return from Europe, a further persistent report having it that they are to be married the latter part of next month.

About Mr. Lytell, he has a perennial life-saver in "The Valiant." This popular and conspicuously excellent playlet is Mr. Lytell's personal property and returns him a steady annual income whether he appears in it himself—as he so frequently does—or leases it out to other actors or the films for picturization in full-feature length. It was this piece, you will recall, that provided Paul Muni with his first film vehicle.

Marian Nixon and Ralph Bellamy are sufficiently prevalent on the local screens this week to satisfy even their most avid public. The former is seen with Jimmy Cagney in "Winner Take All," at the Earle; the latter with Violet Heming and Alexander Kirkland, in "Almost Married," at Loew's Fox. Besides that, they appear together to fine advantage in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," at the Palace.

For what it may be worth—if anything—comes the startling geographic intelligence from old Col. Stephen E. Cochran, impresario of the National Theater Players and panjandrum of Mr. William Harryman Rapley's National Theater, that Lake Hopatcong, N. J., is rapidly drying up. Well, it was a nice spot, while it lasted!

I trust the cartoon comedy, heretofore one of the most inocuously diverting of all the screen's short-reel fillips, is not to be permitted to fall into disrepute. A "Flip, the Frog," cartoon, "School Days," current locally, threatens the high standing of this particular form of entertainment by resorting to lamentable coarseness and vulgarity to provoke what it probably hoped would be laughs but what turns out to be merely resentment instead.

The most cleverly contrived short-reel that has come along in months is Ruth Etting's "A Mail Bride," at the Earle. An ingenious plot and perfectly spotted songs, if you ask us. The songs, incidentally, are "Auf Wiedersehen," "When We're Alone" and "Can't You Talk It Over?"

Or, if you must get fancy about it, "Can't You Talk It Over" "When We're Alone?" Oh, very well then, "Auf Wiedersehen!"

Through the cooperation of Harry M. Crandall, who is premiering his "Pantheon de la Guerre" to an invited audience tonight and to the general public tomorrow, the figure of an American Army nurse has been added to the group of foreground notables in this mammoth canvas. Miss Margaret G. Saxman was chosen by the American Nurses' Association as the model and the figure was painted in by Henry Wadsworth Moore, an American artist resident in Boston, and descendant of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

In response to many inquiries, "Pantheon de la Guerre" is pronounced Pantheon de la Guerre with accent on the gr-r-r-r, although there are those who would be just as well pleased were it Pantheon de Lager, with the accent on the growler!

Dr. Mann to Bring Young Apes to Zoo

5 Baby Simians and Rare Snake to Get Special Care En Route.

Two baby orang-outans and three baby gibbons probably will be brought to Washington today by Dr. William M. Mann, director of the zoo, who went to New York especially to meet them and care for them while en route here.

The young apes were captured in Sumatra by L. Ross Freeman, a rubber chemist and amateur naturalist, who took them under a special permit from the government of the Dutch East Indies, where they are closely protected. When the ship bearing them touched at Boston, Freeman wired Dr. Mann that they were in good health, but as all young simians are delicate, it was decided to bring them here with special care.

Among other animals being brought back by Freeman is an elephant-trunk snake, a rare and valuable specimen. This reptile as well as a few others of his large collection will also be sent to the zoo here.

Man Found Unconscious In Gas-Filled Kitchen

Harry Watt, 38, of 1224 Twenty-ninth street northwest, yesterday was found unconscious on the kitchen floor of his home by his mother-in-law, Mrs. Fannie Jewel. Police said a gas jet was found turned on. They said the windows and doors were closed.

The fire rescue squad and the Washington Gas Light Co. emergency squad administered first aid. Watt was treated at Freedmen's Hospital, where his condition was said to be not serious, and later removed to Gallinger Hospital for mental observation.

Poison Fatal to Woman.

Poison tablets taken with suicidal intent were said by police to have caused the death of Hannah Waters, colored, of 30 Pierce street northwest. She died at Gallinger Hospital yesterday morning.

Conduit Road Work Is Awaiting Fund

Nearly All Houses Along Route Now Occupy New Positions.

With the work of moving back the houses along Conduit road nearly completed, District officials are awaiting an appropriation to proceed with the work of moving traffic off the top of the conduit from Great Falls. Meanwhile, plans are being drawn for two 30-foot roadways, one on each side of the conduit, from Reservoir road nearly to the District line.

Between the roadways will be a 19-foot strip of parking, laid on top of the conduit in place of the present road. To permit the laying of the side roads, 48 houses are being moved back, at a cost ranging from $776 to $8,900 for each house. Landowners along Conduit road were allowed $396,473 for the necessary land by a condemnation jury, but abutting property owners were assessed $162,248 for the benefits they will receive from the improvement.

The new roadways will remove the present weight limit of 6 tons imposed on vehicles using Conduit road. They will also allow the paving work to be done by machinery. At present, surfacing distributors are barred from the road by their weight, and all resurfacing must be done by hand labor. Even under the present weight limits, the conduit is subjected to a strain, although nothing serious is feared.

Man Is Stabbed in Row; Another Seized Later

Robert Dooley, 18, of 949 Massachusetts avenue northwest, was treated at Emergency Hospital yesterday for stab wounds in his left side and abdomen, inflicted by a penknife, which he received during an altercation at his home.

Aivah Turner, 21, of 938 I street northwest, was arrested at his home shortly after Dooley applied for treatment, and held by police in connection with the stabbing.

Indian Suffers Heart Attack in Lunchroom

A full-blood Chicopee Indian is in undetermined condition at Emergency Hospital, where he was taken by the fire rescue squad after collapsing in a lunchroom at 723 Fourteenth street northwest yesterday.

The Indian, Clifford Bristle, of the Chicopee Reservation in Wisconsin, is said to have fallen to the floor while drinking at the fountain in the lunchroom. Physicians attributed the collapse to a heart attack.

KEEPING PEOPLE FIT HELD RELIGION'S AIM

Rev. C. C. Rasmussen Talks at Masonic Service at Temple Heights.

"The business of true religion is not to take people out of the world, but to fit them to live better in it," said the Rev. Carl C. Rasmussen, preaching yesterday afternoon at a special Masonic service held at Temple Heights under auspices of the Grand Lodge of the District of Columbia.

"This goal it is to achieve by leading its devotees to a two-fold departure from mediocrity," he said. "Religion must make its followers, in the generic sense of the word, a 'peculiar' people. If devotees are not 'different' they are not devotees. A city set on a hill can not be hid. If Christians live like non-Christians, both are non-Christians.

"On the one hand, the Christian must be exceptional in the gentleness of his life. Historic battles have been fought in the endeavor to define a Christian. Councils warred about the question. Creeds were formulated. Heretics were burned. Schisms rent the church. And, the battle still goes on. And often the participants in the holy cause seemed perilously oblivious to the great admonition of Paul that 'if any man have not the spirit of Christ he is none of His.'

"But there is another respect in which the truly religious must be different. It is suggested by the words of Jesus to those who stood by when messengers came to Him from John the Baptist. It afforded Jesus an opportunity to pay tribute to the forerunner. And he did so in arresting words. 'The Kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and men of violence take it by storm.' We are amazed. We have always thought of Him as the gentle Galilean, the fullest exemplification of the spirit of the Sermon on the Mount. It seems out of part to hear Him calling for men of violence. In fact Christianity has seemed to have so little place for heroic red-blooded qualities that men have been prone to think it more suitable for women and children than for the 'braver' sex. Men do not want to be meek. They secretly wish to emulate 'he-men.'"
